"NATION'S GREATEST PEACETIME FIELD ARMY"

Current budget discussions at the Pentagon are focusing sharp attention on the U. S. Seventh Army in Europe. To get a first-hand report of this unprecedented organization, THE JOURNAL late last month sent a staff member to Seventh Army Headquarters at Stuttgart, Germany, where he was invited to accompany Lt. Gen. Bruce C. Clarke, USA, Commanding General, on a fast-moving inspection trip to Iron Curtain border units. The story of that inspection is told on Page 11 of this issue.

At the Pentagon this week, Army Secretary Wilber M. Brucker—himself recently returned from a visit to Army forces in Europe—hailed the Seventh Army as "the greatest peacetime field Army in the Nation's history."

Secretary Brucker told THE JOURNAL that his inspection convinced him that the Seventh Army "always close to duty and danger is ready for any eventuality. This is a group of men, brilliantly led, of which all Americans can be proud."

The Secretary was asked about published reports that Army strength in Europe might be cut in the months ahead.

Mr. Brucker replied that to his knowledge "there is no validity to such reports." The Secretary added that "General Taylor and I will fight hard for what we believe to be one of the most important elements in maintaining world peace, namely the magnificent fighting ability, whether with atomic or conventional weapons, of the Seventh Army in Europe."

VADM. FREDERICK W. McMAHON, USN, is briefed by Maj. Gen. Nathaniel A. Burnell, 2d, USA, on the Army Anti-aircraft defenses for the Northeastern United States. Here, General Burnell uses a terrain model to explain the schematic layout of a Nike Guided Missile installation. Admiral McMahon is Commander of the Eastern Sea Frontier, Atlantic Reserve Fleet and Atlantic sub-area for NATO, and U. S. Naval representative of the Joint Chiefs of Staff Commission of the United Nations. General Burnell is Commander of the 1st Anti-aircraft Regional Command and a Deputy Commander of the Joint Eastern Air Defense Force. (Reorganization, P. 3.)

New Missile Firepower Is Revealed, Honest John Gets Mobile Little Brother

ABERDEEN PROVING GROUND
MARYLAND

THE Army's expanding family of missiles and atomic artillery was put on show here 4 October with public display of the distancing Redstone, the Dart anti-tank missile, and the Honest John's baby brother—called Little Honest John.

Before an audience of several thousand members of the American Ordnance Association participating in the 38th annual meeting of that celebrated organization, the Army was permitted to take the wraps off nine new weapons.

Association members and newsmen saw the Redstone and learned how it is helping to advance work on the 1500-mile Intercontinental Ballistic Missile, the Jupiter.

The Nike I anti-aircraft guided missile and the Corporal tactical missile were also exhibited.

On the more conventional side of weapons development, Ordnance experts revealed details of an improved machine gun which is designed to replace all three

A NEW MACHINE GUN goes on display. This is the Army's versatile machine gun (details herewith) which was unveiled at the 38th annual meeting of the American Ordnance Association on 4 October. For remarks by Army Secretary Wilber M. Brucker at the Aberdeen showing, turn to page 27.

DoD Plans $5.5 Million Program To Bolster Ranks Of Nurses And Medical Specialists

The Defense Department has decided on a rigorous program to fight the shortage of nurses and trained medical specialists in the Armed Forces.

Three legislative proposals designed to ease the problem will go to the Congress early in January. The draft legislation includes plans to:

● Establish an officer training program for Army, Navy and Air Force nurses.

● Authorize better promotion opportunities for nurses and medical specialists, and

● Bring Regular AF nurses and women medical specialists within the overall Regular AF officer strength.

The $5.5 million plan to increase promotion opportunities for nurses and medical specialists was drafted last Spring (see THE JOURNAL, 19 May 1956) but was

World's First Missile Wing Commander Tells Problems; "In This Business, We Build To Climax, Then Quit"

(Top Air Force operations planners have said that Martin Matador guided missile units in Europe are pioneering training techniques for future missile organizations. A first-hand report on the peculiar problems which will confront guided missile commanders was obtained in an interview between a JOURNAL reporter and the commander of the world's first guided missile wing.)

USAFE HEADQUARTERS
WIESBADEN, GERMANY

IT'S like taking batting practice without hitting the ball!

That's how Air Force experts describe the intriguing job of training guided missile units that will employ the lethal weapons now coming into the inventories of strategic, tactical and air defense forces.

Lt. Col. Robert F. Zachmann, USAF, puts it this way: "In most Air Force units, officers and enlisted men day by day get a chance to see their aircraft take off, perform their mission, return and land. There's plenty of competition at all echelons.

"But it's another story in the missile business. Here, we build up to the climax that never occurs."

Colonel Zachmann speaks with unique authority, for he is the commander of the world's first guided missile wing—the new 701st Tactical Missile Wing at Hahn AB, Germany.

In the months ahead, it will be Colonel Zachmann's job to blaze new training paths in the Air Force. In this task, his mission will not only be to improve the combat readiness of the 701st, which is equipped with the Martin Matador, but also to accumulate experience that will be employed by other missile wings that will be phased into the Air Force during the next several years.

Before activation of the 701st on 15 Sept. in ceremonies that were attended by Maj. Gen. John K. Gerhart, USAF, 12th Air Force Commander, and Maj. Gen. Robert M. Lee, USAF, 4th Allied Tactical Air Force Commander, Colonel Zachmann commanded the 7382d Guided Missile Group.

The Group included the 1st, 69th and 11th Tactical Missile Squadrons, which arrived in Europe in that order after

Pentagon Seeks Overhaul Of Academy Appointment System; Will Boost Output

Big changes are in store for the Service Academies.

Omnibus legislation, designed to revise the system of appointments to West Point, Annapolis, and the U.S. Air Force Academy, is being prepared for presentation to the 85th Congress.

The proposal will ask for an increase in the number of Regular and Reserve enlisted men who can receive appointments, and an increase of 211 in the number of Presidential appointees.

In addition, the Defense Department will ask authority to make an annual additional appointment to each Academy from the Canal Zone, and one appointment annually to each Academy from Guam, American Samoa, or the Virgin Islands, collectively.

The plan also provides for six appointments each four years (two every alternate year) to the Naval Academy for the Resident Commissioner of Puerto Rico, and authorizes up to 17 appointments annually from "friendly nations"—seven for West Point and the USAFA and 10 for the Naval Academy.

NO RESTRICTIONS would be placed on the nationality of the latter group except that they must be from "friendly" countries. At present, foreign cadets are limited to four from the Philippines and 20 from the American Republics and Canada.

As drafted by the Pentagon, the legislation also authorizes 10 appointments annually for the Air Force Academy from the Civil Air Patrol. This feature was the subject of separate legislation which passed the House during the 84th Congress, but failed to be enacted by the Senate.

The new proposal places all authorized appointments to the Academies on an annual basis providing for appointments regularly rather than only when vacancies occur.

UNIFORM REGULATIONS are established for the commissioning of all cadets and midshipmen in the Regular Armed Forces. No cadet or midshipman could be appointed in a commissioned grade before the date on which his classmates are graduated and appointed. And, no cadet or midshipman who did not graduate could be credited upon appointment as a commissioned officer with longer service than any member of his class at the Academy who has had continuous service since graduation.

Many of the steps contained in the Pentagon proposal have been introduced in the past as separate legislative requests.

The plan to increase the number of Presidential appointees was approved by the House Armed Services Committee in 1955 but was stricken from the House Consent Calendar and no further action was taken.

The new legislation, nailing together all of the various piecemeal bills which have been offered to previous Congresses, was prepared by the Navy, which will act as sponsor for the bill.

More Rank For Logistics Officers Is Goal Of DoD Personnel Planners

TOP Defense Department personnel planners are pushing the Services to provide more high-ranking recognition for officers in logistics and support assignments.

The office of Assistant Defense Secretary Carter L. Burgess is the focal point for this activity.

Assistant Secretary Burgess, military manpower chief, has advised the Secretary of Defense that while 50 per cent of officers are in support activities, only 23 per cent of general and flag officers are other than line.

Mr. Burgess' analysis convinces him that "career officers in support activities are at a disadvantage with respect to promotion to higher rank.

Defense experts say that current elimination provisions are geared to needs for youthful combat leaders and are unsuited for support activities.

General Robinson Heads Services "Medicare" (Navy Family Care, P. 27)

Maj. Gen. Paul I. Robinson, MC, USA, has been appointed Executive Director of the new dependents' civilian medical care program.

He will head the program providing for medical care in civilian facilities to dependents of active duty military personnel.

The Army has been designated the Executive Agent for the "medicare" program.

General Robinson will be concerned with the arrangement for medical care received from civilian sources for the wives and children of those in the Army, Navy, Air Force, Public Health Service, Coast and Geodetic Survey and the Coast Guard.

General Robinson comes to the Army Surgeon General's Office from Letterman Army Hospital, San Francisco, where he has been commanding officer since late in June, 1955.

BRIG. GEN. N. A. COSTELLO, USA, arrived at Ft. Jackson, S. C., to assume duties as Post and U.S. Army Training Center, Infantry commander. He is shown with Brig. Gen. James W. Coutts, USA, deputy commanding general for training at Ft. Jackson.

NEXT WEEK Future Aircraft Missiles Action Wiesbaden Wives English S-sh!

The Journal of 13 October will carry on-the-spot stories by staff members on important military activities in Virginia, France, Germany and England.

The Langley aeronautical laboratory of the National Advisory Committee on Aeronautics is doing vital work—much of it secret—that will play a key role in development of planes and missiles of the future. The NACA will permit some of this story to be told.

• What effect will new weapons, such as guided missiles, have on our joint command set-up in Europe under NATO? You will want to read about this in the report of an interview with General George H. Decker, USA, Deputy Commander U.S. European Command.

• Service Wives are doing a grand job throughout the world in promoting morale of fighting forces and in building international good will. This is related in a chat with Mrs. W. H. Gauss, president of the Wiesbaden Officers' Wives Club in Germany—the largest of its kind in Europe.

• There's been a lot said and done about the jet noise problem in the United States. Less is known about the impact of the jets in crowded England, and the singular problem of SAC on-again-off-again bomber racket.

Col. Hunter Is Deputy To Gen. Gaither At CONARC

Col. W. Hamilton Hunter, USA, has been named Assistant to Lt. Gen. Ridgely Gaither, USA, Deputy Commanding General for Reserve Forces, Continental Army Command, Ft. Monroe, Va.

Colonel Hunter, former Chief of the Reserve Components Division, G-3 (Training) at CONARC, goes to an office created 27 July in recognition of the importance of the Army's expanding Reserve components—the Army Reserve, National Guard, and Reserve Officers Training Corps.

Army Tells Details On New Ordnance Weapon; Three Are For Air Force of the present Army caliber .30 machine guns.

Three new aircraft machine guns of 20 mm, 30 mm size were unveiled. Also a new 175 mm gun with superior mobility.

A new mortar, intended to replace the light howitzer, was exhibited.

With Defense Department approval, the Army also was permitted to show an improved version of the M48 tank.

Still classified is the Lacrosse guided missile, a surface-to-surface weapon for close support operations. The Army was given a green light to say only that Lacrosse consists of a truck-mounted launcher mounted on a standard Army truck and a guidance station. The new missile system was developed under Army Ordnance contract with the Cornell Aeronautical Laboratory, Buffalo, N. Y., and is being produced by the Martin Company of Baltimore, Md.

The Martin Company also produces the Matador Guided Missile for use by Air Force tactical units. (See Page 3 for Story on AF's first Missile Wing.)

Here are essential details on new weapons revealed at the historic Aberdeen Proving Ground facilities in connection with the American Ordnance Association's 38th annual meeting.

DART GUIDED MISSILE: Intended by Infantry and Armored units, the Dart is approximately five feet long with a configuration that is characterized by fins crossing the waistline. It is propelled by a rocket motor containing smokeless propellant and is sufficiently maneuverable to make it relatively safe from rifle, machine gun and antiaircraft fire. Ordnance authorities say that Dart "is a simple but effective antitank missile" with a "high probability that a single hit would destroy a heavily armored tank."

The Dart was developed by the Aerophysics Development Corp., Pacific Palisades, Calif., and is being produced by the Utica-Bend Corporation, Utica, Mich. Both of this plants were acquired by the Curtis-Wright Corporation in its recent arrangement with Studebaker-Packard and are operated as wholly-owned subsidiaries of Curtis-Wright.

LITTLE JOHN ROCKET: Called officially the 318mm Little John Rocket XM47, this weapon is about 12 feet long. The Little John is being built at Redstone Arsenal, Huntsville, Ala.

7.62mm MACHINE GUN, T161ES: This is a lightweight general purpose machine gun, which can be fired from the shoulder, hip, bipod or from a newly developed aluminum tripod mount. It is chambered for the standard NATO cartridge. Development is the result of joint efforts by the Army Ordnance Corps and the Inland Division of General Motors Corporation, Dayton, Ohio, and the Bridge Tool & Die Works, Philadelphia, Pa.

20mm A/C MACHINE GUN (Revolver) M39: A relatively lightweight, electrically fired, gas operated gun, this weapon fires an explosive projectile with greater rapidity and higher muzzle velocity than the 1200 rounds a minute of the caliber .50 machine gun. Weighing about 170 pounds, the 20mm throws a shell which bursts after penetrating the target. Ordnance people explain that its high firing rate is possible because of the five-chamber, revolver-type cylinder which moves ammunition through the feeding, firing and extracting phases at a greater rate than a reciprocating bolt-type mechanism. The Ford Motor Company, Armour Research Foundation, and Pontiac Motor Division of General Motors participated with Army Ordnance in development of this weapon for the Air Force.

30mm. GUN, AUTOMATIC T182: Described as generally similar in design to the 20mm. revolver gun, M39, this is a weapon developed to meet an Air Force requirement, it was stated. It has a high rate of fire and was developed by Army Ordnance in cooperation with Oldsmobile Division, General Motors and the Ford Motor Company.

20mm. GUN T171 (VULCAN): Another weapon shown to the public for the first time is the Vulcan, specifically designed for supersonic jet aircraft. Borrowing features from the 1862 Gatling gun, this weapon has a rotating multi-barreled cluster and is powered externally by either electricity or hydraulic fluid. It was developed by General Electric's Aeronautic and Ordnance Department under sponsorship of Army Ordnance.

175mm. GUN T-45: Army experts assert that this "represents the newest and one of the most versatile in field artillery pieces," incorporating battlefield capabilities that are said to be superior in many respects to the combined features of the 154mm. gun, the 8" howitzer and the 8" gun. The Army said its superiority to these WW II weapons lies in the fact that it can fire in a complete circle and occupy its firing position quickly, with no need to dig recoil and spade pits. The gun has hydraulic electric power, utilized before for towed carriages on the 280mm atomic weapon. The T-45 has new sights which read directly in numbers instead of micrometer scales, thus adding to the speed and accuracy of fire control. This weapon was developed by the Franklin Institute of Philadelphia, Watertown Arsenal and Watervliet Arsenal.

105mm. MORTAR, T33ES: This is a smoothbore weapon with greater range and accuracy compared with preceding models, plus being lighter in weight. The Army reports that these features will permit greater traverse without reemplacement. The 105mm. Mortar, in the field artillery role, will supplement the light howitzer by providing an initial volume of area fire. The capability of the light howitzer unit will be augmented by the provision of very high angle fire to reach over obstacles and by the immediate response possible by close association of this weapon with the supported unit. It was developed by Watervliet Arsenal.

90mm. GUN, TANK, M48E1: Produced by the Chrysler Corporation, this medium tank is equipped with a "highly effective" control system which permits maintaining the 90mm. gun on target and firing while the tank is in motion. It is armed with the 90mm. and two caliber .50 machine guns and is powered by an 800 Ordnance-Continental aircooled engine. The Army said that its 28" wide track, plus the powerful engine and versatile, rugged transmission, gives the improved M48 "excellent mobility and a maximum speed in excess of 30 miles per hour."

B/G Brunelli Reports To 2d Marine Division

Brig. Gen. Austin R. Brunelli, USMC, Chief of Staff, MCS Quantico, Va., has been ordered to the Second Marine Division, Camp Lejeune, N. C., for further assignment.

The General became Quantico's Chief of Staff last month following promotion to one-star rank. At that time he was serving on the staff of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

He is expected to report at Camp Lejeune about 20 October.

OLYMPIC COACH

Maj. F. Don Miller, USA, Fourth Army Special Services officer at Ft. Sam Houston, Tex., and former NCAA light middleweight boxing champion, has been selected as manager-coach of the U. S. boxing team which will compete in the 1956 Olympic Games in Melbourne, Australia.

The U. S. Olympic boxing committee has named Milton "Dubby" Holt, boxing coach of Idaho State College, which won the National Collegiate championship in 1953, to serve with him.

CONAD's Separation From ADC Goes Into Effect; Dual Staff Jobs Abolished

A separate Continental Air Defense Command headquarters composed of Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine personnel assumed control of the nation's air defense system on 1 Oct.

It is headed by General Earle E. Partridge, USAF, who until recently commanded both the Continental Air Defense Command and the Air Force's Air Defense Command. He reports directly to the Joint Chiefs of Staff in Washington.

Under the new setup, General Partridge will maintain control of all forces assigned to the task of defending the United States against air attack. These will include:

The Air Defense Command with its network of radar stations and fighter interceptor bases. It will be led by Lt. Gen. Joseph H. Atkinson, USAF, former commander of the Alaskan Command, who relieved General Partridge of this responsibility 17 Sept.

The Army Antiaircraft Command, commanded by Lt. Gen. Stanley R. Mickelsen, USA, which provides the NIKE guided missile and other antiaircraft weapons for continental defense.

The Navy Forces, CONAD, which has radar picket ships and planes off both coasts and other defense forces. It is under the command of RADM. Hugh H. Goodwin, USN.

General Partridge and his staff also have operational responsibility for the air defense of the Northeast Air Command and the Alaskan theater.

It will also maintain close relationships with the Commander-in-Chief of the Atlantic, Commander-in-Chief of the Pacific, Canada, Mexico and Denmark in matters relating to the defense of the North American Continent.

General Partridge will have an Army major general, yet to be named, for his CONAD chief of staff. Capt. Nelson M. Head, USN, who will report here in December, will serve as assistant chief of staff.

The new headquarters has only three operational staff sections. They are communications and electronics, headed by Brig. Gen. Haskell E. Neal as deputy chief of staff; intelligence, led by Brig. Gen. Robert Taylor III, and plans and operations, with Brig. Gen. Harvey T. Alness at the helm. Administrative and supply services will be handled by the respective service commands.

In addition a secretariat to the joint staff is headed by Col. Cecil H. Scott, present executive officer to General Partridge, while Col. Barney Oldfield is director of information services.

Previously most of the CONAD staff held dual positions with CONAD and one of the other major commands at headquarters.

Col. Pryor Is Deputy

Colonel Delbert A. Pryor, USA, has been named Deputy for Reserve Affairs in the G-4 (Logistics) Section, Headquarters Sixth Army, Presidio of San Francisco.

Colonel Pryor and his wife, Helen W. Pryor, reside with two children, Ralph, 17, and Lynda, 14, at 159 15th Avenue, San Francisco. Another son, Philip, 20, following in the footsteps of his father, is a Second Classman at West Point.

Third Star For General Trudeau, Youth Accent Reaches USMA '37

President Eisenhower has named Maj. Gen. Arthur G. Trudeau, USA, to be a lieutenant general in command of I Corps in the Far East.

He will succeed Lt. Gen. Robert M. Montague, USA. No new assignment was announced for General Montague, but there was speculation that he would be given the Caribbean Command. This appears probable in view of the fact that Lt. Gen. William K. Harrison, USA, is slated for retirement early next year.

The Chief Executive has given a recess promotion to two-star rank to Brig. Gen. Holger N. Toftoy, USA, who commands the Redstone Arsenal at Huntsville, Ala. This is the key guided missile research and development facility.

Approved by the President for future promotion to major general, when a vacancy permits, is Brig. Gen. E. H. J. Carns, USA, who commands the 1st Cavalry Division in Japan.

Four colonels were advanced on 1 October to temporary brigadier general. They are:

Bruce D. Rindlaub, CE, 52, USMA, '29, CG 7th Engineer Brigade, Europe. George W. Coolidge, Armor, 50, USMA '29, III Corps, Ft. Hood, Tex. Irvin L. Allen, QMC, USA, 49, Univ. of Ky. '29, Ft. Lee, Va.

Richard A. Ridsen, Inf, USA, 50, USMA '33, MAA, Taiwan.

The Army is continuing to provide opportunities for relatively young officers with outstanding records to reach general officer rank.

This is pointed up with White House approval of six colonels for promotion to temporary brigadier general as vacancies permit.

Junior man on the list is Col. Arthur W. Oberbeck, 44, USMA '37, who is Director of Special Weapons Development Division, Continental Army Command, Ft. Bliss, Tex.

He will be promoted immediately after Col. Charles W. G. Rich, 47, USMA '35, Assistant Commander, 5th Infantry Division, Ft. Ord, Calif.

Other colonels who will be promoted, in order of seniority, are: Norman E. Youngblood, 53, Assistant Chief of Finance. Walter A. Jensen, 46, USMA '33, CG Camp Irwin, Calif.

Benjamin T. Harris, 47, USMA '33, Deputy CG, Ft. Leonard Wood, Mo. Stuart S. Hoff, 47, Commandant, Signal School, Ft. Monmouth, N. J.

Promoted to brigadier general in the Reserve were: Col. Alfred E. Hintz, NGUS, Div. Arty. Commander, 41st Inf. Div. Col. Robert W. Kenny, USAR, Div. Arty. Commander, 76th Inf. Div. Col. Wendell C. Philippi, NGUS, ADC, 38th Inf. Div.

Col. Donald O. Spoon, NGUS, CG, 115th AAA Brigade.

Pentagon promotion list students have noted that there has been a marked increase in selection of younger officers for general officer promotions during the tenure of Chief of Staff Maxwell D. Taylor in comparison with the situation during the service of General Matthew B. Ridgway.

There are reports that some officers chosen for permanent general officer ranks several years ago, and who are still eligible for further service, may be retiring from active duty in the next several months. This would be a further indication of the accent on younger officers.

Maj. Gen. Trudeau

Better Deal Ahead For Army, Navy, Air Force Nurses — Medical Specialists

From first page—

submitted to the Capitol too late for consideration by the final session of the 84th Congress.

THE PENTAGON NOW PLANS to re-submit the request shortly after the New Year, probably with a "priority" label attached. Responsibility for the promotion legislation is in the hands of the Army.

Meanwhile, however, two additional programs have been put together, and these, too, will go to the new Congress early in the session.

Under the officer training program for Army, Navy and Air Force nurses, the Pentagon will ask for authority to train both Regular and Reserve nurses at Government expense. Each of the Services would administer its own program.

Nurse trainees would be provided free tuition, uniforms, fees, books, school health programs and laboratory expenses. Those recruited from civilian life would receive a monthly retainer amounting to approximately $600 per year. Those already in uniform would continue to draw their regular military pay.

Upon graduation, the nurse trainees would receive Regular or Reserve commissions as second lieutenants or ensigns.

Responsibility for this phase of the nurses career-improvement program is assigned to the Navy.

In addition, Air Force legislation has been drafted to give the AF Secretary authority to place nurses and women medical specialists on the total authorized strength rolls of the Regular Air Force.

The move is designed to provide better stabilized planning for officer strengths on the various promotion lists. It also will remove the possibility of having to separate line officers from the active list in order to create space vacancies for nurses and women medical specialists.

OF THE THREE PROGRAMS, the Pentagon expects the biggest return from the promotion-retirement legislation.

This proposal increases from captain to major in the Army and AF and from lieutenant to lieutenant commander in the Navy, the permanent grade which the average nurse or medical specialist can expect to attain during the course of a full military career.

It also increases the number of Army and Navy officers presently authorized to serve as lieutenant colonels and commanders and establishes the permanent grade of colonel and Navy captain for nurses and medical specialists.

Additionally the proposal would retire nurses and medical specialists of the Army and AF under procedures which apply generally to other Regular officers of those Services.

Permanent colonels and lieutenant colonels in the Regular Army Nurse Corps would be increased to five and 107, respectively (present law provides for only 33 permanent lieutenant colonels and 75 permanent majors). One permanent colonel and 20 lieutenant colonels would be authorized in the Regular Army Medical Specialist Corps (present law provides for only 35 permanent majors in the Regular Army MSC).

The permanent grade structure for AF nurses and medical specialists, including the permanent grades of colonel and lieutenant colonel was established under the Air Force Organization Act in 1951.

The proposal also authorizes original appointments in the permanent grade of captain in the Regular Army and AF Nurse Corps and MSC. This will permit the Army and AF to integrate into their Regular ranks, in grades commensurate with their experience, Reserve nurses and medical specialists who have performed at least seven years of active commissioned service. The Services also would be permitted to make original appointments in the rank of second and first lieutenant.

THE NAVY WOULD be authorized to promote 0.2 per cent of its active duty Nurse Corps officers to the rank of captain, boost the number of commanders from 1.75 per cent to 5 per cent, and remove the limitation on the number who may serve as lieutenant commanders.

All qualified Navy nurses who are serving as lieutenants could be selected for lieutenant commander the first time they enter the promotion zone. For one year after enactment of the legislation, all qualified lieutenants who have been passed over in previous years also could be selected for LCdr.

The proposal will cost about $786,000 during the first year of operation, but this will be more than doubled in the fifth year after the law is enacted. For the first five years the cost will average approximately $1,113,890 annually.

U. S. Army

More Than 5000 Promotions Ahead

The Army is getting ready to announce—probably this month—more than 5000 officer selections for temporary promotion.

It's expected that the first list will contain the names of more than 2500 captains chosen for temporary major.

This will include between 300-350 "truly outstanding" officers, who will be advanced out-of-line with present contemporaries.

The Army will be able to make about 2350 promotions to temporary major from the basic zone, which has a cutoff date of 30 November 1950, according to analysis of recent strength reports.

The "truly outstanding" category includes all officers who will have three years of service as of 31 Dec. 1956.

THE CAPTAIN SELECTIONS are expected to total just short of 3000. This will be about a six month's eligibility list. Authoritative information is that the Army will convene a board to select other first lieutenants for temporary captain next March or April.

A NURSE BOARD now is in session to choose officers for promotions to colonel, lieutenant colonel, major and captain. Figures are not available as to how many selections will be made, but it is known that the Army, pending approval of proposed legislation (see Page 3), has taken administrative action to liberalize Nurse Corps advancements. The aim will be to bring Nurse Corps promotions more in line with time in grade requirements for other branches.

Mrs. Itschner Saluted By Sec'y Brucker As Husband Becomes Engineer Chief

ARM Y Secretary Wilber M. Brucker's esteem for the role of the Army wife was demonstrated this week at ceremonies marking the inauguration of Maj. Gen. Emerson C. Itschner, USA, as Chief of Engineers.

The Secretary gave Mrs. Itschner proper notice of his intention and then called upon her to make a few remarks following the swearing in ceremony, which was performed by Maj. Gen. Herbert L. Jones, USA, Deputy to The Adjutant General.

Mrs. Itschner told of her happiness at her husband's selection to head the Corps of 10,000 officers and 100,000 enlisted men and said that just as he would have a heavy responsibility following Lt. Gen. S. D. Sturgis, Jr., USA-

Ret., so she would have a responsibility to carry forward the magnificent work done by Mrs. Sturgis.

As Mrs. Itschner received applause from the audience in the Secretary's office, Mr. Brucker commented quietly: "The more I hear them, the more I think of the girls in the Army."

First to congratulate the Itschners was a former Second Lieutenant of Engineers, now General Maxwell D. Taylor, USA. The Chief of Staff suggested to Mrs. Itschner that "as the wife of the Chief of Engineers, I am sure you don't have to worry about having a handyman around the house." The Chief Engineer's lady declined comment.

COL. BERNARD AABEL, Chief Medical Service Corps, Office of the Surgeon General, Wash., D. C., chats with Col. Robt. B. Skinner, MC, USA, TAH Commanding Officer, during his visit to Tokyo to discuss current developments of MSC activities with the hospital's medical service officers. He is on a world tour of Army medical facilities.

First of 39th Infantry Back From Germany

The first of four ships returning the 39th Infantry "Fighting Falcon" Regiment of the 9th Infantry Division to this country after a tour of duty in Germany arrived at the Brooklyn Army Terminal 3 Oct.

Some 1000 enlisted men and officers and their dependents arrived aboard the USS Patch, a military transport. Also aboard were members of the 26th Field Artillery Battalion (with Medical Detachment). The Regiment will be stationed at Ft. Carson, Colo., as part of the 9th Inf. Div., which is being replaced overseas by the 8th Infantry Division.

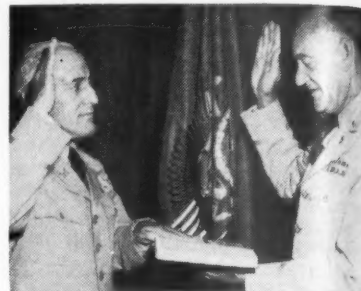

Heads WAC At Reed

Capt. Lois V. Henry, USA, has arrived at Walter Reed Army Medical Center, Wash., D. C., to command the WAC detachment. She served as Assistant Adjutant at the Signal School, Ft. Monmouth, N. J. since 1953.

COL. LUCIUS N. CRON, USA, newly-appointed Commandant of the Army Information School and post commander of Fort Slocum, N. Y., receives the First Army Certificate of Achievement from the First Army Commander, Lt. Gen. Thomas W. Herren, USA. Colonel Cron was cited for his reorganization of the First Army G-2 (Intelligence) Section.

2d Army Will Mark 38th Year on 10 Oct.

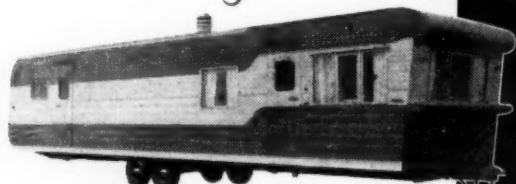

Born on a French battlefield during World War I and now charged with the primary mission of training thousands of Regular Army, National Guard and Army Reserve forces for national defense, the United States Second Army celebrates its 38th anniversary on 10 Oct.

Special activities at Second Army Headquarters, Ft. George G. Meade, Md. will begin with an anniversary review at 10:30 in the morning when Headquarters Second Army and Fort Meade units assemble on McGlathlin Field. Lt. Gen. Charles E. Hart, USA, Second Army Commander, will address and review the troops.

Officers and enlisted personnel and their families will picnic later in the Kelly Pool area of the post.

In the evening, the anniversary observance will be climaxed by a series of social activities in the Officers Club, Non-commissioned Officers Club and Service Clubs at Fort Meade. A formal buffet supper and dance is scheduled for the Officers Club at 7:30.

USAREUR Slashes Logistics Overhead, Bolsters ComZ By Thousands of Spaces

HEIDELBERG,
GERMANY

THE Army is trimming and slimming its logistics overhead throughout Europe in a supply reorganization that will see the command shift of more than 20,000 spaces.

It's part of a drive being directed by General Henry I. Hodes, USA, C-in-C of USAREUR, to streamline his support units at all levels in order to boost combat effectiveness and conserve manpower.

In essence, the USAREUR Logistics Reorganization will see important responsibilities — previously executed under supervision of the USAREUR Technical Services Chiefs — placed under direct control of Maj. Gen. Robert W. Coleglazier, jr., USA.

He commands the Communications Zone from headquarters at Orleans, France, 350 miles away.

By 1 January, it is anticipated here that about 85 percent of the reorganization will be completed. Before the end of the fiscal year on 30 June 1957, the job will be completed.

WHEN THAT IS DONE, General Coleglazier will have virtually complete responsibility for theater logistics support of all U. S. Army combat forces in Europe, centered, of course, in the Seventh Army.

Heretofore, a considerable part of this responsibility has, in fact, been carried out by Supply Control Agencies of USAREUR Headquarters, working under direction of the Chiefs of the Technical Services — Signal, Chemical, Transportation, Engineer, Medical, Ordnance and Quartermaster.

The Signal, Transportation and Chemical Supply Control Agencies came under General Coleglazier with the start of this fiscal year and on 1 October the Engineer and Medical units will be shifted.

The master plan calls for the transfer of the Ordnance and Quartermaster agencies at the start of 1957.

"When we finish this job," says a planning officer at General Hodes' headquarters, "we will have a logistics set-up that will be ready for any emergency."

ONE MAJOR FACTOR that hampering the Army in efforts to streamline the logistics organization has been the lack of adequate facilities in France, including decent housing for military men and their families.

USAREUR officials point out, however, in connection with the implementation of the new plan that small numbers of military men and civilian employees will be required to move because of the changeover.

DESPITE THE FACT that his direct control over military personnel will be increased by approximately 50 percent, General Coleglazier, as CG of ComZ, is being called upon to discharge his substantially increased duties with only a small increase in the overhead at his headquarters.

At USAREUR, General Hodes' people say that the reorganization could mean a savings of several hundred spaces at Heidelberg. These savings would be utilized to fill billets in combat units. Normal attrition will take care of the reduction.

ComZ obviously must tighten its overhead belt at the same time that it takes on large numbers of operating personnel at depots, procurement centers, distribution points and hospitals. That is in line with General Hodes' campaign to achieve manpower reductions in staff activities at all echelons, including, of course, his own headquarters at Heidelberg.

Army Navy Air Force Journal 5
6 Oct. 1956 (Vol. 94, P. 161)

But even more important than the savings in manpower, experts here under Maj. Gen. A. T. McNamara, USA, Assistant Chief of Staff, G-4, stress that the fundamental result of the reorganization will be creation of a single direction of all logistics activities. They say that this strengthened ComZ organization will be able to act quickly and decisively to meet any situation.

*Guide words
for today*

"Today, there are two great peoples who, starting from different points, seem to approach the same destiny; they are the Russians and the Americans . . . American conquests are won with the laborer's plowshare; Russian triumphs with the soldier's sword. To attain his ends, the American relies upon personal interest and allows free scope to the unguided energy and common sense of individuals. The Russian somehow concentrates the power of society in one man. The method of the former is freedom; of the latter, servitude.

Their starting point is different, their ways are diverse, yet each of them seems called by the secret design of Providence to control some day, the destinies of . . . the world."

ALEXIS DE TOCQUEVILLE—1835

The truth about Russia was known four generations ago . . . yet there are still those among us who either do not know or refuse to believe that Communism is an international conspiracy.

These unwitting dupes of Communism have proven the most dangerous element in country after country . . . unknowingly paving the way for Communist control.

Navy Sets Exam Dates For EM Promotions

The Navy has set dates for the February, 1957, Service-wide competitive examinations for advancement to CPO and PO ratings.

CPO tests will be given on the 5th; third class on the 7th; second class on the 12th; and first class on the 14th. Examinations will be conducted in all ratings except Printer and Aviation Electronicsman which are being consolidated with other ratings.

Complete details are contained in BuPers Notice 1418, dated 10 September.

Navy Steps-Up Atomic Sub Training Program

The Navy is stepping up its nuclear powered submarine training program to meet the demands of a growing A-propelled sub fleet.

Two A-sub—the Nautilus and the Sea Wolf—already are operational. Six additional atomic powered submarines are authorized for construction in the Fiscal Year 1957 shipbuilding program.

EM in the Machinist's Mate, Engine-man, Electronics Technician, Electrician's Mate and I.C. Electrician ratings, pay grades E-3 through E-7, and Hospital Corpsmen, pay grades E-6 and E-7, are eligible to make application for the Nuclear Powered Submarine Training Program.

Volunteers must have four years of obligated service at the time they report for instruction and be designated "Qualified in Submarines." They may not be more than 30 years old, must have a combined arithmetic and mechanical test score of 105 and be high school graduates, or have a GED equivalent.

Complete details are contained in BuPers Instruction 1306.53A, dated 19 September.

USN Redesignates Five Amphibious Vessels

Effective 18 October, the Navy will eliminate a classification of amphibious warfare ship.

The ships involved are the Catskill, Ozark, Osage, Saugus and Monitor. Currently designated LSV's (Vehicle Landing Ship), their new classification and hull numbers will be MCS' one through five. MCS stands for Mine Warfare Command and Support Ship.

NEW RAINCOAT

The Navy has ordered fleet trial of a new lightweight blue raincoat designed to be inexpensive, simple and functional in design.

The raincoat is made of a five-ounce treated cotton fabric called Byrdcloth. It is a single-breasted, beltless style with fly-front. A half belt in the back may be added later to give it some fit at the waist.

If adopted it will be an optional item of wear for officers and chief petty officers. It will cost from $12 to $16.

USS Northampton Ends Mediterranean Tour

The Navy's Tactical Command Ship, USS Northampton (CLC-1), has returned to her New York berth following completion of 30,000-mile, five-month tour of duty with the Sixth Fleet in the Mediterranean.

She is commanded by rear admiral-designee Capt. Ephraim P. Holmes, USN. In 1954-55, the Northampton served as flagship for Commander, Sixth Fleet, and during the cruise carried the flag of RAdm. R. W. Cavenagh, USN, Commander, Cruiser Division Four.

In addition to her ship's company of 1200 officers and men, the ship brought more than 100 Fleet men to the States for reassignment and discharge.

Navy Wins National Safety Council Prize

Navy Secretary Charles S. Thomas was presented the National Safety Council Award of Honor by Dr. Fred Dearborn, Council President, at a Pentagon ceremony on 27 Sept.

This is the sixth time that the Navy has won the Council's highest honor for prevention of industrial and motor vehicle accidents.

Marine Board Selects 120 For Lt. Col. Rank

A Marine Corps selection board has chosen 120 majors—more than double the 59 named last year—for advancement to lieutenant colonel.

This year's board, which met on 27 August, picked 104 unrestricted, nine limited duty and seven supply duty officers. In making its selections the board, headed by Maj. Gen. Joseph C. Burger, USMC, Commanding General, Camp Lejeune, N. C., considered officers in a zone which extended from Maj. Wendell O. Livesay, USMC, Lineal No. 192, through Maj. Claude R. LaPlant, USMC, Lineal No. 365, in the 1 Jan. 1956 Combined Lineal List.

There were 265 unrestricted majors in the promotion zone. The board considered 13 LDO's for promotion.

Several officers were selected from above the zone and none from below the zone.

HQMC Sets Meritorious Promotion Quotas

Marine Corps Headquarters has established fiscal Year 1957 quotas for meritorious promotions of PFC's and corporals.

Non-Fleet Marine Force units are authorized to advance eight per cent of their billet corporals to three-stripe and 10 per cent of their PFC's to two-stripe rank.

Some FMF units, however, have been granted quotas of 16 per cent of corporal billets and 20 per cent of PFC billets. These units are: 3d 4.5 Rocket Battery; 1st 8" Howitzer Battalion; 1st 75mm AAA Battalion; 1st Heavy Artillery Rocket Battalion; 1st Medium AA Missile Battalion; Aircraft Engineering Squadron 12 and Helicopter Squadron 1.

Cordiner Committee Receives 48-Item Package From USMC Staff Non-Com's

Asked to "present the facts of life" which make a man want to stay in or get out of the Service, a symposium of Marine Corps Staff NCO's has handed a bundle of 48 suggested improvements to the Cordiner Committee.

The 32 Marine Non-Com's (26 were accompanied by their wives), chosen to represent their contemporaries at a week-long meeting at Quantico, Va., were called into session at the request of the Defense Department's Committee on Professional and Technical Compensation, headed by Ralph J. Cordiner, President of General Electric. The Marine Corps group began its meeting 2 August.

Similar seminars were conducted by the Navy—one at NTC Bainbridge, Md., and another at NTC San Diego, Calif. As THE JOURNAL went to press, the Navy has not decided if it would release the recommendations made by the 200 senior petty officers.

Included in the package handed to the Cordiner Committee by the Leatherneck EM are 23 suggested improvements in Service life which would require Congressional legislation for implementation, or action by the Navy or Defense Department.

The remaining 25 could be placed into effect at the HQMC level. In general, the panel of Marine NCO's considered it doubtful if pay alone would buy a "Career Marine." Pay was not thought to be enough of an incentive to spur first reenlistments.

Among the list of recommendations made by the Marine group which would require legislation or action above the HQMC level are:

Eliminate Federal Excise Tax, raise income tax exemption to $1500 for the Armed Forces, and exempt retired pay from taxation; reinstitute 16-year retirement; increase retirement credits for time spent overseas; review Service retirement benefits in light of civilian industry retirement plans; reestablish marksmanship pay; give awards for beneficial suggestions; authorize special list pay for grades E-3 through E-6; give free dependent dental care; adjust pay scale so that a man will receive a raise every two years after 18 years' service; increase trailer allowance; provide additional and better dependent quarters; revise rank structure of E-7's, include rank structure, pay and allowances of present warrant officer program, and eliminate warrant officer ranks; issue Blue uniforms to all Marines.

Here are some of the suggestions which the NCO's hope Headquarters will place into effect:

Give free haircuts to sergeants and below; improve designs of barracks; issue all uniform items free of charge; arm Staff NCO's with pistols; authorize dependent travel to Far East; advance a man upon retirement; set up five-day work week; increase recreation funds; allow 90-day break between reenlistments without loss of rank; phase out all married sergeants and below; promote Staff

NCO's directly from HQMC; set up dependent education and assistance plan; give preference to men longest on station when making assignments; and reclassify all Marines who twice fail technical tests.

Marines Extend Deadline For Officer Training

Career NCO's seeking appointments as unrestricted officers in the Regular Marine Corps have been given additional time to submit their applications.

The deadline has been advanced to 1 Dec. from 1 Sept. At the same time, HQMC changed the convening date of the Officer Candidate Course from January to March 1957.

In addition, Headquarters has voided scores made by NCO applicants on the old Officer Selection Test. Everyone who desires to be considered is required to take the new Officer Selection Test No. 1.

In order to be eligible for the outstanding NCO program, applicants must have at least three years of active service but not more than eight and be serving above two-stripe rank.

LCdr. Lenihan Heads Newport WAVE School

LCdr. Rita Lenihan, USN, Director, Officer Personnel on the Staff of the Commandant, Potomac River Naval Command, Washington D. C., has been named to succeed LCdr. Winifred Love, USN, as Officer-in-Charge, WAVE Officer Indoctrination School, Newport, R. I.

Commander Love, who was recently selected for three-stripe rank, has held the Newport post since 17 May 1954. Upon being relieved, she reports to Washington, D. C., for duty in the Office of the Chief of Information.

Westinghouse Gets A-Machinery Contract

The Navy has awarded a contract to the Westinghouse Electric Corp., Pittsburgh, Pa., to furnish reactor compartment components for a nuclear powered guided missile cruiser (CLGN).

The atomic propulsion plant will be the first to be installed in a naval surface ship. Its estimated cost is $18.3 million.

The cruiser for which the A-plant is to be furnished is part of the Navy's fiscal 1957 shipbuilding program. The ship will be fitted out with the most advanced armament and guided missiles available for Fleet use.

Earlier, the Navy announced that the light cruiser will be built by the Quincy, Mass., yard of Bethlehem Steel Co.

In cooperation with the Navy, the Atomic Energy Commission is designing and developing the nuclear plant.

HQMC Seeks Officers For SDO Designators

The Marine Corps is seeking applications from permanent and temporary unrestricted Regular officers who wish to have their designators switched to Supply Duty Officer.

Eligible are captains, majors and lieutenant colonels. Particularly sought are requests from officers who have completed a course at the Marine Corps Supply Schools, MCB Camp Lejeune, N. C., or a similar course.

Temporary officers who hold permanent commissions at CWO's WO's or EM are not eligible to apply for reclassification.

Applications will be submitted to a SDO board which will be convened about 10 December. Applicants will be informed by HQMC of their selection or non-selection as soon as possible after the board completes its deliberations.

Col. Rothwell Leads 5th; Other 1stMarDiv Shifts

Col. Richard Rothwell, USMC, Chief of Staff, First Marine Division, Camp Pendleton, Calif., has succeeded Col. James S. Blais, USMC, as commanding Officer of the 5th Marine Regiment based at nearby Camp Santa Margarita.

Colonel Blais has assumed duties as Division Assistant Chief of Staff, G-1.

Other officers who have recently assumed new duties within the First Division are:

Lt. Col. C. S. Sanders, jr., USMC, Commanding Officer, Headquarters Battalion, who swapped posts with Lt. Col. L. P. Hunt, USMC, Division Inspector.

Lt. Col. O. V. Bergren, USMC, Executive Officer, 7th Marines, took over as Division Legal Officer from Lt. Col. E. J. Mee, USMC, who reported to the 5th Marines.

Lt. Col. W. A. Wood, USMC, became Executive Officer, 1st Service Regiment, relieving Lt. Col. H. H. Riche, USMC, who assumed duties as Executive Officer of the 7th Marines.

Lt. Col. L. J. Dulacki, USMC, succeeded Lt. Col. K. W. Norton, USMC, as Commanding Officer of the 9th MT Battalion. A new assignment for Colonel Norton has not been announced.

Lt. Col. D. H. Simmons, USMC, has reported for duty as Assistant G-3, 11th Marines.

Lt. Col. J. B. Carpenter, jr., USMC, Assistant G-1, reports for duty with the 7th Marines.

Lt. Col. E. P. Dupras, USMC, is the new Assistant G-3 for Training, succeeding Maj. J. E. Cuneo, USMC, who took duties as Assistant Plans Officer.

Commands Stephen Potter

Cdr. Eldon L. Edwards, USN, in a recent change of command ceremony at the British Crown Colony of Hong Kong, succeeded Cdr. Neal Almgren, USN, as Commanding Officer of the destroyer USS Stephen Potter.

Commander Edwards reported to his new command from the Staff of the Naval War College, Newport, R. I.

NEW MARINE G-2 BACK FROM JERUSALEM

Col. Robert E. Hommel, USMC, reporting from an assignment on the U. N. Observer Group, Jerusalem, has assumed duties as Assistant Chief of Staff, G-2, HQMC.

Lt. Col. Loren D. Everton, USMC, who held the post temporarily, remains at Headquarters as Colonel Hommel's Assistant.

USN Contracts For Two Vessels In New Class

The Navy has let a $12,767,078 fixed price contract to the American Shipbuilding Co., Cleveland, Ohio, for construction of two additional escort vessels in its new DE-1033 class.

The Navy let its first contract for the DE-1033 class, as yet unnamed, in May.

The American Shipbuilding contract calls for building of the third and fourth vessels in the new class. They will bear hull numbers DE-1035 and 1036. This class of vessels are 312 feet long, have 38-foot beams and a light displacement of 1,350 tons. The main propulsion consists of four engines connected to a single shaft and a single screw, controlled by a single rudder.

The DE-1033 class of patrol vessels can be fitted with either diesel engines or conventional steam turbines. These design features will permit mass production in the event of swift mobilization.

RADM. A. G. Mumma, USN, Chief, Bureau of Ships, points out that the DE-1033 class are powerfully armed with the most modern anti-submarine weapons and sonar devices. In addition, they have excellent maneuverability characteristics, a tight turning radius, and the low silhouette desirable in ships engaged in ASW missions.

The ships will be manned by a crew of 15 officers and 162 men.

NCO Academy Plan Sent to Field

Blueprints for uniform Senior NCO Academies and NCO preparatory schools have been sent by USAF Headquarters to all major commands in the Z. I. and overseas for comment and recommendations.

They are expected to be printed in regulation form by mid-November.

Publication of the regulation and curricula of the NCO and pre-NCO schools will culminate two years of study and work to develop a standardized Air Force.

The Senior NCO Academies will be operated by the major commands and attended by selected master and technical sergeants. The standardized curriculum of 220 hours or more of instruction will require at least five weeks residence in a command's centrally located academy. With AF-wide standardization of instruction NCOs no longer will face the possibility of attending other Senior NCO Academies when transferred to new commands.

The Senior NCO Academy curriculum, developed by Hq USAF and Air Training Command, will place heavy emphasis on drill and ceremonies, communicative skills, human relations and leadership, training, supervision and management. Other subjects will include military justice, AF history, military courtesy, customs and protocol, physical training, and world affairs.

The NCO prep course of 120 academic hours spread over a 15 day period will be conducted at base level for selected airmen aspiring to NCO status. It offers the prospective NCOs a similar course of instruction as the Senior NCO Academy curriculum, but on a more elementary level.

Col. Washington Heads San Antonio PX Office

Col. Dudley S. Washington, USAF, has been assigned as San Antonio Regional Officer for the Army and Air Force Exchange Service.

Colonel Washington will supervise the operation of the 45 main post and base exchanges in a five state area including Texas, Oklahoma, Louisiana, Arkansas, and New Mexico. He replaced Col. Jack McFarland, USAF, who has been transferred to the Air War College at Maxwell AFB, Georgia.

Prior to his new assignment, Colonel Washington was Base Commander at Wolters AFB, Tex.

Air Command And Staff School Class Numbers 819; Includes One RCAF Officer

More than 800 officers have entered the Air Command and Staff School, Class of '57, Phase I and II, at Maxwell AFB, Ala.

The group includes one Royal Canadian Air Force officer, five Navy officers, 12 Marine Corps officers, 15 Army officers, and 823 Air Force officers. The breakdown of Air Force students by major command is as follows:

Transportation Reps Meet at Robins AFB

Approximately 200 rail, highway, and air carrier representatives from throughout the United States participated in a recent transportation conference at Robins AFB, Ga.

Maj. Gen. A. V. P. Anderson, jr., USAF, Commander of the Warner Robins Air Materiel Area, welcomed the conferees. He was introduced by Col. B. J. Raily, WRAMA Director of Supply and Services.

Col. J. A. Smith, Air Force District Traffic Officer, outlined USAF and District Traffic Officer transportation policies. Hi-Speed Transportation Control Card was the subject of a talk by Lt. J. R. Baines, chief, Traffic Management Branch.

Maj. W. P. Kelley, chief, Services Division of the DTO, spoke on Loss, Damage, and Claim Prevention. The conference was concluded by an open discussion conducted by Col. Smith.

Capt. R. B. Roberts, transportation officer for Robins AFB, was project officer. Lt. Col. J. A. Dunning, WRAMA Assistant for Transportation and Services was monitor for the conference.

Matador Missile Wing In Germany Pioneers Training For Future AF Units

training in Florida. At the outset, however, before the arrival of the 11th, the missile units had been responsible to base commanders—the 1st to the 36th Fighter Wing at Bitburg and the 69th to the 50th Fighter-Bomber Wing at Hahn.

In February, a high-level decision was made to activate the 7382d Tactical Missile Group as an interim organization to pave the way for the Air Force's first guided missile wing. Colonel Zachmann moved up to head the Group from command of the 69th Tactical Missile Squadron.

With the activation of the wing last month, each of the three squadrons was redesignated as a group, with a strength of about 800 officers and airmen.

Thus, the 1st Tactical Missile Squadron became the 585th Tactical Missile Group, including the 1st Tactical Missile Squadron, the 585th Communications and Guidance Squadron and the 585th Support Squadron. Similar set-ups were approved for the other two squadrons. The 69th became the 586th Group and the 11th the 587th Group. Eventually, the Wing is expected to have a strength of about 3000 officers and airmen under Colonel Zachmann and his Executive Officer, Lt. Col. Hans U. Smithline, USAF.

Commander of the 585th Tactical Missile Group is Lt. Col. Louis Wright, USAF. His opposite numbers are Lt. Col. Eugene G. Mulling, Jr., USAF, who heads the 586th and Maj. Paul Ireland, USAF, commander of the 587th.

Colonel Zachmann and his unit commanders are engaged in extensive training programs that are culminated with annual firing exercises at a range in North Africa.

ALL THE MATADOR UNITS are completely air transportable. Fairchild C-119's and Douglas C-124's are used to move the missile outfits from Germany to Wheelus Field in Tripoli. This is no mean feat, since the launchers weigh 35,000 pounds.

"The most enjoyable part of all our work is when the units are able to fire the missile," the Colonel relates. He calls a missile firing "one of the grandest thrills in the world, but also one of the shortest."

Colonel Zachmann, 40, who was commissioned in September 1942 after service as an enlisted man, says that proficiency scoring in a missile unit varies considerably from other organizations. He explains that accuracy is given less weight relatively than its other firepower activities.

The potency of the Matador's armament, he explains, makes it less essential that the "bird" hit in the middle of the bull's-eye. Anywhere within a given radius is satisfactory.

Heavy emphasis is placed on reliability—a key factor in missile operations—and on a unit's ability to launch the weapon

THE "BIRD"

The TM-61 Martin Matador is the first ground to ground missile to be made operational by the Air Force. Tactical squadrons are equipped with it both at home and abroad. Ground equipment features the zero-length launcher, mounted on a mobile trailer.

The Matador's primary mission is the destruction of surface targets by day or by night, under all weather conditions. It resembles a conventional jet aircraft, with swept wings and a T-tail. It is launched by a rocket which drops off when the bird is airborne after which it is propelled by an Allison jet engine.

Provision has been made for a breakdown into separate shipping elements—the nose, wings, tail parts, electronic shelf and other major components. These can be reassembled in the field, interchangeably with like components.

at pre-specified times.

In Germany, though the Matador cannot be fired, the 701st is able to work each day on all other phases of missile operations.

Specially equipped Lockheed T-33 jets with the same guidance system as in the Matador are flown to keep the communications and guidance men in constant practice.

EACH OF THE GROUPS also works continuously on the job of assembling and checking-out the birds. Frequent simulated launchings are called—some on short notice—with a run-through of all operations, even to the complete count-down.

"Then at X minus O, after the engines have been started, we call everything off," Colonel Zachmann comments. "We don't get the satisfaction of seeing the missile take off and do its job, but the 701st knows that we have a big job to do, not only here in Germany but in helping to pave the way for the weapons of the future."

Working closely with Colonel Zachmann and his Group commanders are crack missile maintenance experts from the Martin Company in Baltimore, Md., under direction of Mr. James S. Steele.

Major Webster Is PIO

Maj. Alfred D. Webster, USA, has taken over the duties of Public Information Officer at Ft. Slocum, N. Y., succeeding Maj. Robert W. Leonard, USA, assigned as an instructor in the Policy and Operational Procedures Department of the Army Information School.

Major Webster comes from the Public Information Office at Ft. Polk, La.

New Courses At ECI

The Air Force Extension Course Institute at Gunter AFB, Ala., recently activated its first course in the administrative career area (70), and activated two new courses in the communications-operations career area.

Opening up the 70 area to ECI students is Course 7022, Basic Clerical. It is a four-volume course covering typewriting, maintenance of records, grammar, and military correspondence. To enroll in the course the student must possess a minimum ACB or AQE aptitude index of 4 in the clerical aptitude cluster.

The two new courses in communications-operations are Ground Radio Operator (Course 2931), and Airborne Radio Operator (Course 2932). In order to be eligible to enroll for either of these courses the applicant must have completed ECI Course 2930, Basic Radio Operator, or any resident course awarding a radio operator AFSC upon graduation.

Course 2931 is a two-volume course which describes a typical radio set, the SCR-499, and tells what its various circuits and components do. It also presents the communication procedures used in the air and on the ground.

Course 2932, in two volumes, covers the maintenance and operation of typical airborne radio sets and equipment and sets forth current radiotelegraph and radiotelephone communication procedures.

$15-Million Facilities Allotted Holloman

New facilities totaling $15,600,000 will be constructed at Holloman Air Development Center, N. Mex.

Scheduled for construction are an officers mess, bachelor officers quarters housing 49 men, service club, electronic laboratory, missile assembly building, missile laboratory, fuel testing laboratory and special test facilities. Invitations for bids are scheduled at various times during the next few months, with the first invitations this month.

CHAPLAIN (LT. COL.) GLEN C. SHAFER, USAF, Staff Chaplain for Western Air Defense Force, receives the Air Force Commendation Ribbon from Maj. Gen. Roy H. Lynn, USAF, Commander, Western Air Defense Force at Hamilton AF Base, Calif. The Ribbon was awarded for "meritorious service" as Wing Chaplain at Lackland AFB, Tex.

ROCKETS IN ARCTIC

Four scientists from the Air Research and Development Command's Air Force (Cambridge) Research Center have gone to Fort Churchill, Canada, where they will make preparations for the firing of rockets into the Arctic atmosphere.

The four men will prepare the first two rockets which will be launched in the Hudson Bay area. The firings, scheduled for the middle of this month, are the first of the long series planned for the International Geophysical Year of 1957-1958.

Rocket studies of the upper air have been limited to New Mexico because permanent launching facilities were not available elsewhere.

Army Progress. The Army, which has not always been the most vocal Service in bringing its wares to public attention, let down the bars somewhat this week and put nine new weapons on display for members of the American Ordnance Association meeting at Aberdeen Proving Ground. These new weapons, described in detail in our story beginning on the first page of this issue, are forward looking products of the Army-Industry team, all designed to give more punch and firepower to the smaller, more mobile organizations now in the making. Most of the weapons are lightened in weight so as to contribute to mobility while adding to firepower. While no specific statements were made, one can easily see that many of these, when they go into production, will fit in with the plans for such new organizations as the light 11,500-man 101st Airborne Division described from Ft. Campbell, Ky., in last week's JOURNAL and the powerful and strategic SETAF unit reported from Italy in our 22 Sept. issue.

It is no secret, either, that these are only a few of the weapons the Army is developing. Behind them are many more in various stages of progress, all aimed at making our small ground forces capable of covering more territory and throwing more metal than is possible by larger armies not so equipped.

In this week's issue, THE JOURNAL is proud to present a first-hand report from a staff member in Germany of the marvelous Seventh Army and the way in which its constant state of readiness and alertness is contributing to stability and peace in Europe. We are pleased, too, to report Secretary Brucker's determination to fight for the preservation of this magnificent fighting machine and its atomic and conventional capabilities.

These are facts which the public and Congress should know—particularly in this critical period when it is apparent that the ground forces will have to weather another storm of economy.

The Services' Ambassadors. The important part Service wives play in the effectiveness of the Armed Forces was pointed up this week by Secretary of the Army Wilber M. Brucker when he called upon Mrs. E. C. Itschner to speak at the Pentagon ceremonies when her husband took the oath of office as Chief of Engineers and by the Secretary's subsequent remarks extolling the wives' role. (See story on page 4.)

Now that most of the clubs in which wives of commissioned and non-commissioned officers are active, are getting their busy season underway, it is timely to recount some of the good work they do that cannot be done as well through any other agency. One of the most important is the part the wives play in maintaining good relations and mutual understanding between the Service folk and their civilian neighbors. This is important at home; it is doubly important overseas. The wives do a good job because they do it naturally. They associate far more frequently with their neighbors than do their husbands. They are customers at the local stores; they participate in local charity and welfare work; their children often go to local schools; their committees are frequent visitors to hospitals, orphanages, etc.; in fact, they have hundreds of daily contacts in the conduct of their households and through the work of their clubs. Abroad, they are really the Service Ambassadors to all our neighbors and allies.

In the military circles they are constant factors in keeping life cheery and making it better. Their garden clubs brighten their temporary homes; they establish and operate nurseries and kindergartens; they operate thrift shops and use the profits for their welfare work.

Benefits Coverage Praised

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Your publication's recent coverage of the Servicemen's and Veterans' Survivor Benefits Act and the Armed Forces Regular Officer Augmentation Act of 1956 was gratifying to me and members of my staff.

Of particularly wide significance to Army commissioned and non-commissioned personnel, the Survivor Benefits Act is considered one of the most important pieces of recently enacted legislation for the serviceman and his family. Your "Army Navy Air Force Journal" has done an excellent job in publicizing the details of this Act.

I wish to extend my thanks to you and your personnel for considered effort to inform Army personnel of these career incentive benefits.

QM Board Seeks Analysts

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

The Quartermaster Board (Ft. Lee, Va.) is currently recruiting for personnel to fill certain Civil Service vacancies.

The need exists for "Military Analysts," men who are capable of performing broad conceptual and organizational studies relating to present and future employment of the Quartermaster Corps of the Army.

Prior commissioned military service is a most desirable, although not mandatory prerequisite. In its absence, a high level of formal education should have been attained, preferably involving extensive experience in research.

My thought in writing to you is to ask that you publish this letter in the columns of your paper, so that these job opportunities may come to the attention of persons who may be interested, and who may have the necessary qualifications. Such persons may write direct to me.

The present service policy to release officers from active duty if un-serve with the military personnel and to all outward appearances are part of the organization. With the missile wing reported from Germany on the first page of this issue, there are, for example, 15 tec reps from the Martin Company, manufacturers of the Matador.

These tec reps are constantly at hand checking maintenance, serving as liaison with the manufacturers, and observing actual operations. Through them the manufacturers learn of any "bugs" that may develop in their products and are thus able to correct them. Through them, too, come new ideas that can lead to new weapons with capabilities far beyond existing ones.

There are no available figures on how many tec reps are serving with the forces. But they are all over the world, wherever U. S. Forces are serving, from the Far East to Europe and Africa. So closely are they identified with the Services that numbers have been killed and wounded in the performance of their duties. The work they do is invaluable to the National Defense and is further and strong evidence of the potency of the American Defense-Industry team.

IN THE JOURNAL

10 Years Ago—Personnel of the Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Coast Guard have been authorized to wear civilian clothing during off-duty hours on shore in the Western Hemisphere and in all United States possessions.

50 Years Ago—While there have recently been a few cases of yellow fever in Havana and some of the neighboring districts, the fear expressed by some of the daily papers that the disease will prove a serious menace to the American troops now entering Cuba is not warranted by prevailing conditions. The fact is that the American military authorities have already taken vigorous measures to safeguard the health of the troops ordered to the island, and the result will be an immediate improvement in sanitary control in every district where our forces are stationed.

90 Years Ago—It is related that at the battle of Custoza an Italian regiment, very highly equipped, was sent forward to seize upon an important position, but an Austrian corps, throwing off their knapsacks, outran the Italians, and having first reached the eminence, held it against the enemy. The Austrian knapsack is the lightest in Europe, and weighs 10 pounds.

able to complete 20 years before they reach age 55 is not fair. Hundreds of officers affected by this policy are being released at the termination of the present category and are denied the opportunity to stay in the service until they reach age 55.

This unfairness should be corrected by changing the current policy to permit reserve officers on active duty who are otherwise qualified for category renewal and who upon attaining age 55 would not qualify for retirement under Title II Army & Air Force Vitalization & Retirement Equalization Act, to be retained until age 55. All officers who can complete 18 years or more of active duty before attaining age 55 should be retained to qualify under Title II Retirement.

Active duty credit, earned by reserve officers prior to entry on extended active duty should be credited as valid active duty service and added to the total active Federal Service in evaluating the ability of an officer to complete 20 years to age 55.

"Green Bullets" Fly Throughout Seventh Army In Wake Of Commander's Visits; His Broadides Cover Hot Trays, Soldier Votes And Atomic Attack Alertness

SEVENTH ARMY HDQS.,
STUTTGART, GERMANY

THERE'S something plain and old fashioned about the world's first atomic field army—and that is the use of footpower by its hustling Commander in checking up on things.

As Commanding General of the U. S. Seventh Army, universally recognized as the mightiest ground field force ever assembled in peacetime military history, Lt. Gen. Bruce C. Clarke, USA, leads a new-fangled battle line-up that can, if necessary, deliver more firepower than General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower's forces at the end of WWII.

In event of emergency, General Clarke, at the command of SHAPE, could call into instantaneous play shattering resources. He has available, around the clock and seven days a week, two armored, and two infantry divisions; also the 11th Airborne Division, the first unit of its kind ever assigned overseas in peacetime.

Crack Seventh Army elements are fortified by three Armored Cavalry Regiments, which are its "eyes and ears" along the Iron Curtain and the deep-throated roar of 280mm. gun battalions, Honest John Rocket and Corporal Guided Missile batteries, all of which can go both ways—conventional or atomic, as the combat situation dictates.

The Seventh Army is acclaimed by Free World military commanders such as General Alfred M. Gruenther, USA, Supreme Allied Commander Europe, as "the shield of NATO." If the Russians move aggressively, Red troops will bump immediately against the potent punching ability of the Seventh Army.

How is this shield kept polished?

Green bullets are an important part of the answer. This is the story of how these bullets are fashioned and delivered.

The story begins here at Seventh Army Headquarters in Stuttgart at 0402 (correct 0402) on a recent Tuesday morning. Earlier in the night, there had been a reception at the General's quarters for a visiting inspection team from the Pentagon and the Continental Army Command at Ft. Monroe, Va.

General Clarke

The reception over at eleven, General Clarke and his junior aide, Capt. Fred Tibbetts, USA, swing aboard a diesel train—it once belonged to Herman Goering—for the start of a whirlwind inspection trip.

A JOURNAL reporter who covered the trip step by step should have been forewarned. For there it was plainly printed on a sign in a conspicuous spot in the lounge car:

"An organization does well only those things the boss checks."

As boss of the Seventh Army, General Clarke makes that slogan stick.

This is how he does it.

At 0745, the train arrives at Kitzingen. General Clarke is met by Maj. James D. Akins, USA, whose 62d Tank Battalion of the 10th Infantry Division, has been alerted for the inspection.

With rare exception, General Clarke does not believe in surprise visits. He wants to see a unit at its best.

Also on hand to greet the Seventh Army Commander is Brig. Gen. Stanley R. "Swede" Larsen, USA, newly promoted and now Assistant Division Commander. He was once senior aide to then Chief of Staff, General J. Lawton Collins.

The formalities over, General Clarke arrives by car at 0800 at Harvey Barracks, onetime the home of a German Luftwaffe unit. Tanks now are parked on the landing strip.

Major Akins presents the General with a self-evaluation form in which all Seventh Commanders assess their own units. General Clarke gets one copy; another goes to the commander's next higher headquarters.

The major briefs the general on the 62d, recounting how it was derived from the 33d Armored Regiment and is entitled to five battle streamers. Major Akins relates that his unit has 75 per cent RA personnel, and General Clarke notes that this is higher than the 60 per cent Seventh Army average. He adds that there are only 20 per cent Regular officers in the Seventh Army and expresses the hope that the new Augmentation Law will improve this situation quickly.

The briefing over, General Clarke, General Larsen, Major Akins and Captain Tibbetts move to an adjacent training area where the tankers are going through their paces.

Himself a renowned Armor leader after long service as an Engineer officer, General Clarke moves easily from one training group to another. He talks for a moment with SFC Roy Rockholt, who is instructing a group of soldiers about nomenclature and handling of ammunition.

General Clarke and the Sergeant, joined by General Larsen and Major Akins, talk for a few minutes about the problems of standardizing on a smaller number of ammunition types. That is obviously a matter that is up for continual discussion, particularly among commanders in the field and experts back in the States, including those at CONARC and scientists in the Operations Research Office.

M/Sgt. Samuel Matalone points up the high experience level of the NCO leaders in the battalion as he tells the Seventh Army chief of his 3 years and two months service with this unit.

The General talks with his men about economy procedures and tells them of the demands made by new cost-accounting and funding regulations. A newsman's inquisitive question brings out the fact that in order to conserve on purchase of tank tracks, which cost $10,000 per set, and to preserve the tanks, soldiers of the 62d leave their weapons behind when they go to Grafenwoer for firing exercises.

This means, of course, that in event of war, the 62d would be required to fight with tanks they have not fired. But with restrictions on maintenance and operations funds, field commanders have no alternative.

The visit with Major Akins' unit moves along quickly and General Clarke is back in the barracks area shortly after 1000 to continue his inspection.

He asks Company Commander Capt. Eugene E. Reardon, USA, if something more can't be done to make the living quarters more homelike. "Perhaps we could get curtains up and some rugs on the floor, particularly with the cold weather coming," says the General at the start of the barracks tour.

He's told that this is being done and, sure enough, on the second floor the general finds that a number of the rooms have been transformed.

Moving along through the barracks, General Clarke stops briefly before a sign on the bulletin board, which gets its message across quickly and simply. It says: "Persons needing thumb tacks are requested to obtain them from the supply room; not from the bulletin board."

A visit to the messhall—one of perhaps 50 that were made in the course of two days—evokes from General Clarke—the atomic field commander—a question as to whether or not the serving trays are kept warm. He says it's a simple matter to do with the use of light bulbs behind the storage racks.

What about the problem of ice cream melting too quickly?, the general is asked by a guest. He says that was licked by serving ice cream in containers, "so there's not much excuse for not providing a soldier with a warm tray."

General Clarke questions T/Sgt. Horace King as to "How often you serve soup?" He utilizes a 10-minute coffee break to discuss the problem of garbage, and how steps can be taken to keep the level below the authorized one pound per day per man.

The sweep of the Seventh Army Commander's area of concern is pointed up as he departs the messhall, with congratulations to Sergeant King, and is ushered into a room for a secret briefing by Maj. Nelson McCouch, USA, Commander of the 35th Engineer Battalion.

Later, General Clarke explains that the 35th is Gyro'ing with the 9th Engineer Battalion at Ft. Lewis, Wash. This will not take place until next March, but planning already is well along.

The General says that Operation Gyroscope is paying big dividends to the Army.

The 35th is part of the 37th Engineer Group—the largest tactical engineer combat group in the world. Its commander, Col. Woodrow W. Wilson, USA, a former West Point grid great, is on hand at Kitzingen to participate in the inspection. Lt. Col. Howard B. Coffman, USA, is Group Executive Officer.

Visiting with officers and soldiers of the 35th, General Clarke wants to know how long it takes to get a pair of shoes repaired. What about the laundry facilities? How much participation is there in the Soldier Deposit program?

General Clarke comments that he is always interested in the Soldier Deposit participation. "When savings are high, invariably it's a sign of an outfit with high morale," he comments.

Now it's time for another messhall visit. This one is run by a real pro, SFC Raymond "Mom" Taylor. He has been at Harvey Barracks for nine years. Operation Gyroscope will end this stay, but Sergeant Taylor tells the General that "it's O.K. as long as I stay with this outfit."

After lunch, General Clarke is es-

Gen. Clarke's Demands On the Seventh Army

"The Seventh United States Army in Germany is a unique organization in many ways. It is the only balanced and fully equipped Field Army the United States has ever supported in time of peace. It has a mission of being constantly combat ready in a foreign land. It has a high percentage of career officers and enlisted men.

"Because of this uniqueness, the Seventh Army has many obligations. It is looked upon as the part of the United States Army to set the pace in training, development and testing of new doctrine and all field duty procedures. It is considered a professional Army and as such it must set the standards of excellence in all things: training, marksmanship, tactics, maintenance, management, economy, intelligence, supply and evacuation, tactical atomic employment, troop leading, movement, and other military techniques.

"Career personnel of the Seventh Army must take the lead in all these things. They must set the professional standards in all the procedures and techniques mentioned, but what is more, they must set the standards in ethics, conduct, interservice teamwork, leadership, local public relations, etc. We career personnel, especially, are very privileged to serve in such a unit.

"We have in the Seventh Army many fine non-career officers and enlisted men. They will ultimately leave us to man and lead the great Reserve Army that the United States is now building. We owe a great responsibility to these officers and men to prepare them for their positions, not only while in the Seventh Army but for their positions in the Reserve Army in which they will serve later.

"We are in constant contact with our NATO allied forces. They expect from the Seventh Army the highest order of excellence in the professional military field. We are fortunate in being called upon to play a large part in the building of the new German Army, both by active assistance and by example and standards."

These are the things the boss checks.

General Hodes Tells Europe Manpower Need

USAREUR HEADQUARTERS
HEIDELBERG, GERMANY

HE Commander-in-Chief of U.S.

Army forces in Europe says he earnestly hopes no action is taken which will impair the effectiveness of the Seventh Army. General Henry I. Hodes, USA, calls this "the first ready-to-go atomic field army in military history."

Questioned here about reports from Washington that Defense officials are talking about the possibility of "thinning out support elements," General Hodes stresses that his combat units have an urgent need for every man that can be saved from a logistics assignment. (See Page 5.)

The USAREUR C-in-C insists that the great firepower of the Seventh Army will not eliminate—in fact will heighten—the necessity of forcing an enemy to mass his troops in event of aggression.

At the Pentagon, Army planners are emphasizing that substantial ground forces will be essential to drive enemy ground forces into what are described as "atomic killing grounds" where new weapons can be employed to advantage.

From his Heidelberg headquarters, General Hodes is giving great attention to the impact of new units and new weapons.

Never before in U.S. history, for example, has an airborne division been stationed overseas, together with two armored divisions, as is now the case in the Seventh Army. That combination spells new problems—for example, maneuver planning.

General Hodes also is busy with advance planning for the first NIKE units that will be assigned to Europe. He cannot anticipate that real estate problems which caused considerable complications in the placement of first NIKE units in the United States will be any less in Europe.

General Hodes reports that he is pleased with steady increase in Regular Army personnel. He says that this increased stability in manpower results in "substantial increases in combat effectiveness."

He emphasizes, however, that Gyroscope was designed on the assumption that Army manpower strength would remain relatively stable for an indefinite period of time—an assumption that was presented to top Administration officials at the time of its inception.

General Hodes concluded an interview with a visiting newsman with the observation that his commanders are faced by an enemy force of 22 divisions. "These divisions," he adds, "are getting better training, better manpower and more mechanization all the time."

memo

THE PENTAGON WILL URGE Budget Bureau approval of a plan, now being worked out by the Cordiner Committee, to boost the pay of top DoD "managers," both military and civilian. Secretary Wilson has been advised by Manpower Chief Carter L. Burgess that "present pay levels do not provide a differential between the pay of senior and junior military men consistent with the differential in responsibility." A PAY STUDY shows that in light of inflation, higher ranking officers now receive only one-half as much as they did 40 years ago. There's strong DoD support for action to boost the pay of Army, Air Force and Marine Corps colonels and above and Navy captains and above.

ANOTHER CORDINER COMMITTEE ACTION will be a recommendation that more civilians be placed in top military management posts. Asst. SecDef Burgess has declared that "we need to restore team balance by allocating to civilians more managerial positions in support activities and by strengthening our civilian career development programs." He says the present set-up is unbalanced and "is heavily weighted in favor of top-flight military managers."

MORE CRAMPED QUARTERS are in store for U. S. forces in Germany. The reason: expansion of the German Army and Air Force is certain to mean their use of facilities now in exclusive control of Seventh Army and USAF units. Chances seem good that U. S. and German elements will occupy some kaserns jointly.

TWO NEW DEGREES are in the making for Service officers. The Pentagon has agreed to plug for Congressional approval of plans which will permit the Navy JAG School to grant degrees and credits on the same basis as other recognized law schools in the U. S., and to establish the Army Medical Service Graduate School on a graduate degree granting status. The 63-year-old Army school is not authorized to grant academic graduate degrees although outstanding civilian graduate schools accept work done there as credit toward graduate degrees.

GOOD CONDUCT AWARDS lack unification. The Marines have just switched their ground rules. Heretofore, a Leatherneck could receive two non-judicial punishments in three years and still win the medal. Now, the USMC limitation has been cut to one—the same as in the Navy. THE ARMY SAYS, however, that there is no limit on the number of non-judicial punishments in connection with awarding the Good Conduct Medal. The Air Force reports it doesn't keep score on such punishments, although changes are under consideration.

AIR AIR FORCE MAJOR GENERAL will be named momentarily to head the world-wide Army-Air Force Exchange Service, with headquarters in New York City. He will replace Maj. Gen. H. L. Peckham, USA, who is retiring.

THERE'S A REVERSE PITCH in Europe over the relationship of tactical air forces and ground force strength. In the U. S., much attention has been given in recent years to a persistent Army contention that the Air Force has failed to supply adequate tactical aircraft strength to meet Army needs. In the European Theater, Air Force leaders are concerned that threatened reductions in Army strength will result in lack of adequate protection by ground elements for key air bases. THEY WANT ASSURANCE from Army commanders that sufficient numbers of soldiers will be assigned to protect air installations.

A PLEA FOR MORE DEPUTY CHIEFS OF STAFF will be made by the Army early next year. At present, the Army has only three deputies, compared with five each in the Navy and Air Force. New legislation will ask authority to establish six Deputy C/S billets in the Army and "such number" of Assistant Chiefs of Staff as the Army Secretary considers necessary. Army ACofS spots currently are restricted to five.

ARMY SERGEANTS are envious of the Navy's chief petty officer uniform. The Cordiner Committee has been told by an advisory group of Army sergeants that soldiers who reach E-7 (master sergeant) rank should be permitted to wear a distinctive uniform as is done for the Navy Chiefs.

THE ARMY'S BID for jet aircraft will be intensified with forceful budget-time statements by top civilian and military leaders on the urgent need for speedier planes to be used in "target acquisition" situations. They will argue that introduction of new artillery weapons with high firepower yields steps up the need for jet observation planes to replace the slow-poke WWII aircraft. COMBAT COMMANDERS of new atomic units, such as SETAF at Verona, Italy (The Journal 22 Sept.) say that the problem of rapid target acquisition becomes increasingly critical with employment of atomic weapons. THE ARMY IS CONFIDENT that eventually DoD will lift the wraps on its purchase of jets. CofS Taylor contends his Service should be allowed to buy whatever weapons and equipment it needs to fulfill its missions—limited only by budgetary ceilings. Looking to the future, the Army has designated Lt. Col. Jack W. Ruby, USA, to command a Jet Trainer Test Detachment at the Army Aviation School, Ft. Rucker, Ala. A NEW INDICATION of the increased stature for Army Aviation is the choice of its Director, Maj. Gen. Hamilton Howze, USA, as "Man of the Month" by the National Aviation Club in Washington, D. C. He was honored at a reception on 2 Oct.

A NEW NIKE VS. TALOS squabble at the Pentagon or on Capitol Hill would have adverse effects in Europe where U. S. commanders are just starting to negotiate for NIKE sites. If foreign officials feel that the JCS is not decided on which system is superior for shooting down enemy planes, they are certain to put up stiffened opposition to giving up valuable real estate sites around major cities and key defense facilities. THERE SEEMS LITTLE QUESTION, on the basis of the 84th Congress, that the Armed Services and Appropriations Committees will waste little time after January in probing for answers to the Nike-Talos controversy.

DEPARTING SHAPE, General Gruenther can be expected to cite the air defense set-up as a major shortcoming of NATO. His planners would like to see something comparable to General Partidge's COMAD organization for Europe, but so far that's only a hope.

THE ARMY'S ATOMIC STREAMLINING, set in motion with activation of the 101st Airborne Division at Ft. Campbell, Ky., will be accelerated with modernized versions of an infantry and armored division. Pentagon planners, working with experts at CONARC, are hopeful that smaller-sized infantry and armored divisions will be off the drawing boards by next Spring.

DUSA Style Show Will Aid Charities

The Ft. McNair Officers' Club will again be the setting for the annual benefit luncheon and fashion show, sponsored by the Washington Chapter of the Daughters of the U. S. Army, on Monday, 22 Oct., at 12:30 p.m.

In making the announcement, Mrs. John G. Van Houten, publicity chairman for the event, said that one of Washington's leading stores will put on the show, featuring a world-famous collection of dresses, suits and costumes for day, afternoon and evening. Musicians from The U. S. Army Band will provide the music.

Honored guests at the affair will include Mesdames Wilber M. Brucker, Maxwell D. Taylor, Charles C. Finucane, Chester R. Davis, George H. Roderick, Hugh M. Milton, 2d, F. H. Higgins, William H. Martin, and Frank G. Millard.

The occasion will raise money for national charities, such as the American Red Cross, the American Cancer Society,

Air Force Children Win Valuable Aid From General Arnold School Fund

THE General Henry H. Arnold Educational Fund of the Air Force Aid Society is helping 96 Air Force children get a college education or vocational training, with average scholarships of approximately $450 for the 1956-57 school year.

Seventeen are children of deceased Air Force personnel, 12 are dependents of retired Air Force personnel, and 67 are sons and daughters of active duty personnel.

The Educational Fund provides scholarships for colleges or vocational training above the high school level to dependent children of Air Force personnel. The scholarships are non-competitive and are based on financial need with first priority given to children of personnel who died on active duty or as a direct result of their service.

The money is furnished as a grant, a non-interest bearing loan, or a combination of both, depending upon the financial circumstance of the applicant's parents. It is not intended that these scholarships cover the entire expenses. The parents are expected to furnish part of the money and the students should be able to earn part of the cost through part time jobs.

The 96 children being assisted this school year will continue to be helped under the Educational Fund until they graduate as long as they make sufficient credits for promotion each year and continue to meet all other eligibility requirements. Scholarships are given for one year at a time but students may request renewal.

Applicants may select their schools as long as they are accredited, and it is the responsibility of the applicant to make arrangements for admission.

Application blanks and further information on these scholarships may be obtained by writing: Director, Air Force Aid Society, Washington 25, D. C.

CmlC Wives Club—

The Chemical Corps' Wives Club with Mrs. B. R. Bierer, president, and Mrs. William M. Creasy, honorary president, takes pleasure in announcing the first of its regular monthly luncheons on Tuesday, 9 Oct., at 12:30 p.m., at the Naval Gun Factory. Mrs. Roy I. Olson and Mrs. George M. Dingee will be hostesses for the afternoon. Club members will model a collection of Fall and Winter hats, presented by a well known Washington milliner.

VA Warns On Income Ceiling For Pensions

Widows and children of deceased Servicemen are being warned by the Veterans Administration to report immediately any increase in income that would raise their annual income above the legal ceiling.

Pensioners of WW I, WW II and of the Korean conflict may receive VA pensions only if their annual income from other sources does not exceed $1400 without dependents or $2700 with minor children.

The annual income of those receiving pensions is checked by the VA through the medium of annual questionnaires distributed about 1 Jan. each year. Later, if the person receiving the pension fails to notify VA promptly of an increase in income which raises her income above the statutory limit, payments are discontinued retroactively to the first of the year.

This creates an overpayment, VA said, and is subject to recovery by the Government.

If a widow notifies VA promptly of an increase in her income, payments are discontinued as of the date the last payment was made and no overpayment results.

NAPLES, Italy—Mrs. Elmer E. Yeomans, wife of RADm. E. E. Yeomans, USN, Deputy Commander Naval Striking and Support Forces Southern Europe, holds the flags of the 15 NATO member nations to represent the theme of the 13th Conference of American Women's Activities in Europe. The Conference is to be held 2-4, Oct. in Berchtesgaden, Germany, and General Lauris Norstad, USAF, Commander designate of SHAPE, will be the keynote speaker.

Washington Engineer OWC Honors Mrs. Sturgis—

Mrs. Samuel D. Sturgis, Jr., retired this week from her office as honorary president of the Engineer Officers' Wives Club of Washington, amidst a show of affection and esteem from the members, who entertained in her honor at a tea on 3 Oct., at the Army-Navy Country Club. Mrs. Sturgis, whose husband is the outgoing Chief of Engineers, was presented with a farewell gift from the organization, by Mrs. George H. Walker, vice-president of the group, in place of the president, Mrs. Earle B. Butler, who was ill. Mrs. Walker was also in the receiving line.

Among those attending as guests of the Club were Mrs. Carter B. Magruder, wife of the Deputy Chief of Staff for Logistics; Mrs. Emerson L. Cummings, wife of the Chief of Ordnance; Mrs. James D. O'Connell, wife of the Chief Signal Officer; Mrs. Paul F. Yount, wife of the Chief of Transportation; and Mrs. Richard G. Knox of Chicago, daughter of General and Mrs. Sturgis.

Mrs. Emerson C. Itschner, whose husband is the new Chief of Engineers, was among those presiding at the attractively decorated tea tables. Mrs. Herbert P. Donald, program director of the organization, was assisted in arranging the party by a committee headed by Mrs. William H. McKenzie, 3d. Mrs. Alfred D. Starbird was in charge of the hostesses. Mrs. Stephen R. Hammer was chairman of the floor committee and Mrs. Edmund K. Daley handled reservations.

ICAF Women's Club—

The Women's Club of the Industrial College of the Armed Forces will hold a luncheon on Tuesday, 9 Oct., at the Officers' Club, Ft. McNair, beginning with a sherry hour at 12 noon, when an Arlington, Va. Shop will stage a parade of new Fall fashions. Music will be by the "Jumping Jacks."

Serving the Club as officers this year are president, Mrs. Russell D. Hale; vice-president, Mrs. Robert F. Pike; secretary, Mrs. Robert E. Herndon, Jr.; and treasurer, Mrs. Carney G. Laslie, Jr. Honorary president is Mrs. Robert P. Hollis, wife of the Commandant of the College.

Obituaries

Capt. Walter Karig, USNR-Ret.

Funeral services were held at the Immanuel Church-on-the-Hill, Seminary Hill, Va., on 3 Oct. for Capt. Walter Karig, USNR-Ret., who died at the age of 57, on 30 Sept. at the U.S. Naval Hospital, Bethesda, Md., following a heart attack. Burial was at Arlington National Cemetery.

A veteran of both World Wars, Captain Karig, who was Book Editor of the Washington Post and Times Herald, was himself a distinguished writer, the author of some 20 children's adventure books, four novels and the six-volume story of the Navy in WWII, "Battle Report."

Educated in New York public and private schools, Captain Karig studied at the New York School of Fine Arts, extending his education, after his WWI Infantry service, at the Ecole Julien in Paris.

His newspaper career began as sports writer on the Norfolk Virginia-Pilot in 1919, and the following year he went as Editor of the Elizabeth City, N. C., Herald. From 1921 to 1942, Captain Karig was with the Newark, N. J., Evening News, serving both as writer and artist and later, representing the paper in Washington's News Bureau. A prolific writer, while representing the Evening News, he turned out many articles and commentaries for magazines and overseas newspapers.

Beginning his Naval service with a civilian assignment in 1941, Captain Karig was special representative of Secretary of the Navy Frank Knox, and was aboard the USS Wichita during the occupation of Iceland.

In 1942, he received his commission as a lieutenant commander in the Naval Reserve and was assigned to the Navy Department's Office of Public Information, in which he organized the Magazine and Book Section. He served as its Chief throughout WWII, except for short periods of detached duty in 1943, on convoy duty aboard the USS Texas in the Mediterranean, and in 1944, when he was with the Commander-in-Chief, Pacific Fleet.

In 1943, Captain Karig assumed the additional duty of Officer in Charge of the Navy's Narrative History Project, and in 1945 he was named Assistant Director of Public Relations. Between 1946 and 1948, when he was retired from active duty from injuries sustained in the Pacific, Captain Karig was a member of the Navy Secretary's Committee on Reorganization, with collateral duty as Press Aide to Fleet Adm. Chester M. Nimitz, then Chief of Naval Operations, and for a brief period, served on the staff of the Commander-in-Chief, Pacific Fleet, in the organizational work on the Trust Territories.

Following his retirement from active military service, Captain Karig remained to serve as Special Assistant to two Chiefs of Naval Operations, Adm. Louis Denfeld and Adm. Forrest Sherman. Later he was assigned to staff duty with the Commander-in-Chief of Naval Forces, Far East, when he organized the press and public information offices in Korea. Thereafter, Captain Karig served as Special Deputy to the Navy's Chief of Information and as Special Assistant to the Secretary of the Navy for Public Relations, until April 1954.

Eminent in the field of writing and singularly distinguished for his work for the U.S. Navy, Captain Karig held the highest esteem of his civilian and military colleagues. For 16 years he had been an active member of the Gridiron Club, composed of 50 Washington correspondents, and was the author of many of the famous organization's wittiest skits.

Surviving him are his widow, Mrs. Eleanor Freye Karig of 3834 Seminary Rd., Alexandria, Va., and two daughters, Mrs. Francis A. Carrier of Alexandria, and Mrs. Richard L. Ruffner, Jr., of Fairfax County, Va.

RADM. Leroy Reinburg, USCG-Ret.

Funeral services were held on 28 Sept. at the Ft. Myer, Va. Chapel for RADM. Leroy Reinburg, USCG-Ret., who died of a heart attack at the Public Health Service Hospital, Ft. Worth, Tex., on 22 Sept., at the age of 74. Burial was at Arlington National Cemetery.

Born in Washington, D. C., in 1882, the grandson and son of Naval officers, he was graduated from the U. S. Coast Guard Academy in 1905, and spent 28 of his 40 years service at sea. At the United States' entrance into WWI, Admiral Reinburg was Executive Officer of the cutter Ossipee, then engaged

USMC Reopens HAM Station In Capital

Henderson Hall's amateur radio station, W4-NTR, is back on the air after a year of silence.

Henderson Hall, located in Washington, D. C., is the Marine base for HQMC personnel.

The station was reopened recently when General Randolph McC. Pate, CMC, conversed with Maj. Gen. Robert O. Bare, Commanding General, 1st Marine Division, Camp Pendleton, Calif.

Commending the radio staff who made the reactivation possible, the Commandant termed the station "one of the Marine Corps' greatest morale boosters."

In the past, Marine amateur radio stations have carried messages from overseas Marines to their relatives in the States.

In addition, HAM stations have kept Marines and their families posted on approaching storms and hurricanes.

MCAS El Toro Receives New Supersonic Planes

Two new supersonic planes—the Douglas A4D "Sky Hawk" and the North American F4J "Fury"—have hit the flight lines at MCAS El Toro, Calif.

Four more of the planes are expected to be delivered to the Air Station this week and by mid-October, El Toro squadrons should be about 50 per cent equipped with the planes.

As new models arrive, the F9F "Cougar" (a twin-engine night-fighter) will be phased out.

In submarine patrol and escorting convoys of merchant vessels through the North Atlantic and Mediterranean. By the war's end, he was Commanding Officer of the USS Druid, flagship for the Allied Barrage, consisting of 30 warships. Subsequent to WWI, Admiral Reinburg commanded the Reserve Squadron based at New London, Conn.; commanded the New York Destroyer Force Division II; and served as Chief of Staff of the Jacksonville, Fla. Division. He had three different tours of duty at the Coast Guard Headquarters, Washington, which included such assignments as Supply Officer, Equipment Officer and Assistant to the Director of Purchases on the Federal Purchasing Board; Special Assistant to the Treasury's Director of Supply; and was the Coast Guard's first Public Relations Officer. From 1935 to 1938, Admiral Reinburg served as Commander of the Chicago Division and Captain of the Port, in which capacities he won distinction in the supervision of flood rescue operations along the Mississippi and Ohio Rivers. From 1937, throughout WWII and until his retirement in 1946, Admiral Reinburg was Commandant of the Coast Guard Yard at Curtis Bay, Baltimore.

He is survived by one son, Lt. Leroy Reinburg, jr., presently at the Third Coast Guard District, New York; two daughters, Mrs. Virginia Statton of Baltimore, and Mrs. Ellmore Diakos of St. Petersburg, Fla.; and two sisters, Mrs. Mary K. Riley of 1870 Wyoming Ave., N. W., Washington, D. C., and Mrs. Helen Stika of Ft. Worth, Tex., wife of VADM. Joseph E. Stika, USCG-Ret. His brother, Capt. John Reinburg, USCG, was a former Superintendent of the U. S. Coast Guard Academy.

Mrs. Frances Langmade Gants

Funeral services were held at Walter Reed Memorial Chapel, Washington, D. C., on 3 Oct., for Mrs. Frances Langmade Gants, 51, wife of Col. Robert T. Gants, MC, USA, who died at Walter Reed Army Hospital, on 29 Sept., after an extended illness. Burial was at Arlington National Cemetery.

Born at Oberlin, Kans., the daughter of Judge and Mrs. William S. Langmade, Mrs. Gants was graduated from the University of Kansas in 1926. She married Colonel Gants in 1929, while he was still in the Medical School of the University of Kansas. Since 1953, when her husband became Chief of Surgical Service at Walter Reed Army Hospital, she had lived in Washington. A member of the Alpha Chi Omega sorority, Mrs. Gants was the 1955 treasurer of the Army Medical Service Woman's Club at the Army Medical Center.

In addition to her husband, she is survived by one son, Pfc. Robert M. Gants, now stationed at the U. S. Military Academy Preparatory School at Stewart AFB, N.Y.; a daughter, Miss Margaret Frances Gants, now a student at Mt. Vernon Junior College; her mother, Mrs. Margaret Langmade of Oberlin; and two sisters, Mrs. J. H. Nelson, Dean of the Graduate School of the University of Kansas, and Mrs. Richard Stevenson of Colorado Springs.

Col. William J. Barden, USA-Ret

Funeral services were to be held at noon Friday, 5 Oct., at Christ Episcopal Church, 31st and O Sts., N. W., Georgetown, Washington, D. C., for Col. William Jones Barden, CE, USA-Ret., who died at his Georgetown home, on 2 Oct., at the age of 86. Burial was to follow at Arlington National Cemetery at one p.m.

Graduated from the U. S. Military Academy in 1894, Colonel Barden was graduated from the Engineer School in 1897, and served as an instructor in Mathematics at the U. S. Military Academy the following year. He saw two years service in Cuba, during the Spanish-American War, prior to becoming an instructor in Military Engineering at the Engineer School for two years. From 1910 to 1913, Colonel Barden was Commandant of the Engineer School at old Washington Barracks. Graduating from the Army War College in 1914, he served as Chief Engineer under General Funston in the Vera Cruz Expedition, and later, commanded the 5th Engineer Regiment at Dallas, Tex. During WWI, Colonel Barden served in France as Chief Engineer of the 3d, 6th and 9th Army Corps. Upon his return to the United States, he saw duty as District Engineer in various states and, from 1920 to 1923, was in charge of construction on the Wilson Dam at Muscle Shoals, Ala. In 1932, Colonel Barden was appointed Senior Member of the Board of Engineers for Rivers and Harbors, in which capacity, he served until his retirement from active duty in 1934.

Following his retirement from military service, Colonel Barden became Consulting Engineer for the Esso Shipping Co., until, in 1940, he was recalled to active duty and was assigned District Engineer at Washington, D. C. Reverting to his retired status in 1942, he had continued private practice as a consulting engineer, until the present time. Colonel Barden was a member of the American Society of Civil Engineers and of the American Society of Military Engineers.

He is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Claudia B. Smedberg, wife of the Superintendent of the U. S. Naval Academy, RADM. W. R. Smedberg, 3d, USN; one son, Col. Albert R. S. Barden, USA-Ret, of 7814 Exeter Rd., Bethesda, Md.; five grandchildren, Mrs. Claudia S. Adams, wife of Cdr. R. S. Adams, USN, Lt. William R. Smedberg, 4th, USN, now on duty at the Pentagon; Midshipman Edwin B. Smedberg, a second classman at the U. S. Naval Academy, and Misses Florence Helen and Mary Stuart Barden; and three great-grandchildren, Robert Stark Adams, Claudia Stuart Adams and William Renwick Adams. Colonel Barden's wife, the former Claudia Rhett Stuart of Charleston, S. C., died in 1942.

Capt. Marion Edwyn Harrison, DC, USN-Ret.

Capt. Marion Edwyn Harrison, DC, USN-Ret., died at the U. S. Naval Hospital, Bethesda, Md., on 30 Sept., after a prolonged illness. He was 71 years old.

A native of Charleston, S. C., Captain Harrison received his DDS degree at George Washington University in 1906. Following private practice in Washington, he entered the U. S. Navy in 1913, serving aboard many ships, including the battleships USS Wyoming, USS Oklahoma and USS Pennsylvania. Prior to WWI, Captain Harrison saw service with the Legation Guard in Peking, China, and in the Philippines. During WWI, he had sea duty, as well as service in France and in England, largely with the Marine Corps. Following his retirement from active duty, in 1945, Captain Harrison practiced Dentistry in Washington and in Arlington, Va., as his health permitted.

He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Jessye Cilles Harrison of Arlington; and one son,

30 Civilian Leaders Attend Joint Civilian Orientation Conference

Eighty representative leaders in civilian activities are attending the Twenty-Third Joint Civilian Orientation Conference of the Armed Forces which got underway this week.

The meetings opened at the Pentagon on 4 Oct., where current military and political situations were outlined by top Defense Department leaders.

Following the Pentagon presentations, the Conference members began a series of visits to Army, Navy, Air Force and Marine Corps installations. These visits will cover the period through 12 Oct.

At the Quantico Marine Base, the conference members watched a simulated beach landing by amphibious forces. As THE JOURNAL went to press, the group was scheduled to arrive at the U.S. Naval Air Station, Pensacola, Fla., to witness Navy sea, land and air exercises.

From Pensacola, they will go to Eglin AFB, Fla., on 7 Oct. for a demonstration of aerial firepower. The Army demonstrations will be held 9-11 Oct. at Fort Benning, Ga., where The Infantry School will conduct firepower demonstrations of infantry weapons, night defense problems, airborne operations and a simulated attack by Infantry-Tank-Artillery team units.

Here is a list of the civilian leaders who were invited to attend the conference:

corted by Lt. Col. Maurice D. Meyers, USA, 41st Engineer Battalion, to Flak Kasern. In the sedan, he checks to make sure that a Seventh Army Safe Driver sticker is displayed. He has inaugurated a command-wide safe driving campaign in an effort to cut down on accidents.

At Flak Kasern, General Clarke inspects the 10th Medical Battalion of the 10th Infantry Division, commanded by Maj. Charles L. Glasscock, USA.

This is an unusual command situation, for Major Glasscock is a Medical Service Corps officer. There are few MSC officers who command such battalions anywhere in the world; normally, a Medical Corps officer gets the assignment.

Introduced by Major Glasscock, General Clarke tells the soldiers of the 10th Medical Battalion that "never in the history of the world has an Army had such medical support as the Seventh Army can count on in event of trouble."

He is greatly interested by the Division Medical Academy, which provides 180 hours of instruction for 30 students each four weeks. The Seventh Army Commander asks Major Glasscock about training in the handling of mass atomic casualties.

General Clarke also wants to know from the Major "how much interest is there in Soldier Voting." The answer is given that all of the soldiers who have shown an interest have been advised as to their voting privileges.

Another messhall visit prompts a question about "how many times you serve eggs here." The answer is five.

General Clarke is pleased to see a handsome sign showing the day's menu at the start of the line. He comments that this is what he wants to see at all messhalls. "The trouble with going to a smorgasbord," General Clarke relates, "is that you can't plan your meal ahead. I believe in putting the menu before the troops where they can see it."

Leaving the Medical Battalion, General Clarke and Colonel Meyers tour the 41st Engineer Battalion area. There's a briefing, another messhall inspection (and each time there is a fancy welcoming cake, which the general must forego "on doctor's orders") and inspection of the tool room. Later in the afternoon, General Clarke is shown the drivers' range and there's a visit to a wooded area where soldiers are being instructed in camouflage.

General Clarke tells a camouflage class how he had been privileged to spend some 25 years of his career as an Engineer officer, serving with engineer battalions in three different divisions.

Next on the agenda—and now it's 1515—is a visit to the 710th Ordnance Battalion, led by Maj. Frederick Heath.

This inspection is followed by a tour of the 1st Field Artillery Battery (Rocket), 72d Field Artillery Group, V Corps, under Capt. Eddie E. Manns, USAR.

Captain Manns, as commander of the first Honest John Rocket unit, is visibly proud as General Clarke tells his men in a talk at 1700 that "this 'Ace in the Hole' unit dramatizes the tremendous artillery strength of the Seventh Army. It is really fantastic."

Then, talking with Captain Manns, General Clarke learns of a problem that has come up. It has to do with a piece of equipment that affects the mobility of the Honest John unit. Details are best not reported.

But this is the time for a Green Bullet. The General turns to Captain Tibbets, his aide, and asks that a note be made of Captain Manns' problem. That note, as many others collected in this inspection, will be transformed into an "action memorandum" for the Seventh Army staff upon the general's return to Stuttgart. The memoranda are written on green paper—hence the "Green Bullet" tag.

Just before returning to the train, General Clarke gets a commander's late afternoon pick-me-up. Touring a messhall, he is intrigued by SFC Harry C. Butler's printed confession: "We must tell the truth. We have the best mess hall." Whether this is the best mess hall at Flak Kasern, Germany, or the entire World, the Sergeant's sign does not say.

Back at the train, General Clarke talks with Colonel Meyers about some matters that need attention and then draws General Larsen aside for some final remarks.

At 41, General Larsen is one of the youngest general officers in the Army. It is apparent that General Clarke, as a Senior Commander, wants to get the feel of what the future leaders of the Army are thinking.

The next morning, Wednesday, General Clarke arrives at 0706 at Bad Kissingen and is greeted by Col. Wilson M. Hawkins, USA, newly arrived commander of the 14th Armored Cavalry Regiment. This is one of the three Armored Cavalry Regiments of the Seventh Army which are posted along the Iron Curtain.

The day's activities begin at Kissingen with an 0800 closed-door briefing in the war room at Daley Barracks, a former German Artillery Kasern.

The Seventh Army Commander learns here about what has been seen in the last few days by soldiers of Lt. Col. Dan P. Briggs' 2d Battalion.

Again, there is reason for a Green Bullet.

The briefing completed, General Clarke travels by car to a pistol range, where Lt. Dale Merlin is the instructor. Close by, the General watches Lt. Roy Haskell run the rifle range.

At 0920, Lieutenants Merlin and Haskell interrupt their training and gather their soldiers in a comfortable semicircle around General Clarke. He wants to tell these soldiers, who soon will be patrolling the border in weather that goes to 30 degrees below zero, how important their job is.

"The first unit of the Seventh Army that I visited after taking command was the 14th Cavalry," says General Clarke, "and now I'm starting a second round. You guard one of the most important sectors on our front."

General Clarke, anxious that every soldier in his command should understand the significance of his job, makes a particular point to the soldiers at Bad Kissingen that "now it's the fall of the year and the Russians have their harvest in. If they should want to strike, this would be an advantageous time."

Turning to the NCO's, General Clarke tells them that "you men are particularly vital to the success of such a unit as this. We must depend on you for outstanding leadership. You have a tremendous responsibility."

All along the inspection trip, General Clarke misses no opportunity to give the enlisted soldier a pat on the back. His technique is to do everything he can to give the lower-ranking soldier a feeling of importance. In speaking with NCO's at Kissingen, as at Kitzingen the previous day, he gets them to talk about their leadership responsibilities.

At the officer level, General Clarke

WEST POINT GETS T.V. SALUTE

The U.S. Military Academy's glorious history will be given nation-wide television prominence with the launching of a new half-hour dramatic series called "Est Point." First show was Friday, 5 October, at 8:30 p.m. EST on CBS-TV.

Sponsored by the General Foods Corporation, the show is designed to salute the achievements of West Points and its graduates.

To assist in the supervision of these pictures, a television board, headed by Col. Elvin R. Heiberg, USA, Professor of Mechanics, has been appointed at USMA. It consists of representatives from the Academic Departments, the Tactical Department, the Registrar, and the Public Information Office. Each script is checked for authenticity and accuracy so as to portray the Academy in a true light.

The Technical Advisor for the series is Col. Russell P. (Red) Reeder, USA, Assistant Graduate Manager of Athletics and author of several books about West Point, including: "West Point Plebe," "West Point Yearling," and "West Point Story—A Child's History of the Academy."

Tactical Department Representative, Capt. Frank Hamilton, USA, arranges for Cadet participation and Capt. Walter Frankland, USA, Assistant Public Information Officer, coordinates arrangements involving post agencies other than USCC.

In addition to Colonel Heiberg, Colonel Reeder, and Captain Frankland, other members of the USMA Television Board are: Col. W. J. Renfro, Professor of Foreign Languages; Col. J. J. Ewell, Assistant Commandant of Cadets; Col. E. W. Richardson, Public Information Officer; Lt. Col. C. E. Covell, Assistant to the Dean of the Academic Board; Maj. G. E. Wear, Operations Officer, USCC; and Maj. R. S. Day, Registrar.

At a premiere showing in Washington this week, Maj. Gen. Garrison H. Davidson, USA, Superintendent, hailed "West Point" as "an unprecedented opportunity to bring the Military Academy intimately to the people of the United States."

Also attending the Washington showing were Lt. Gen. Walter L. Weible, USA, Deputy Chief of Staff, Personnel; Maj. Gen. Guy S. Meloy, Jr., USA, Chief of Information; Maj. Gen. Paul D. Harkins, USA, and numerous Defense Department officials including General Counsel Mansfield Sprague and Director of Information C. Herschel Schooley.

PARATROOPERS of the 82d Airborne Division jump from the Fairchild C-123 Provider transport over Ft. Bragg, N.C., as Air Force and Army personnel determine the aircraft's capabilities for dropping men and equipment into a combat zone. The tests were headed by Maj. M. Myers of the 324th Test Group (Transport and Equipment), Air Force Operational Test Center, Eglin AFB, Fla., and the C-123 is attached to the 513th Troop Carrier Group, Sewart AFB, Tenn.

"Army Will Keep Feet On Ground Of Practicality," Secretary Declares

ABERDEEN PROVING GROUND, MARYLAND

ARMY Secretary Wilber M. Brucker this week told of atomic weapons progress, but declared also that "While we are reaching out to explore fully every possible avenue of approach to the better weapon or piece of equipment in every category, and to examine every idea, we are at the same time determined to keep our feet firmly on the ground of practicality."

He made this remark in connection with a showing of new weapons to the 38th annual meeting of the American Ordnance Association (see Page 1).

Here are the key excerpts from the Secretary's address:

"We have atomic weapons precisely tailored to the Army's needs which can be used with discrimination against close-in as well as far-distant targets, with complete accuracy day or night despite rain, snow, fog, or any other weather condition. The CORPORAL guided missile, the 280-millimeter gun, and the HONEST JOHN rocket give us a valuable interim atomic capability. In the not-too-distant future we will have whole families of guided and ballistic missiles and rockets to give artillery the vastly increased range and effect necessitated by the conditions of atomic warfare. Units are being organized and trained to utilize one of these new missiles, the comparatively long range, extremely accurate, and powerful REDSTONE missile.

"The Army is making good use of its 13 years of pioneering experience in the missile field, in developing missiles of far longer range.

"IT WOULD BE A GRIEVOUS error for anyone to think that because it now has atomic weapons and guided missiles, the Army can discard all of its conventional weapons and rely on atomic weapons alone.

"We must constantly press forward with the utmost vigor in the field of atomic weapons, missiles, and rockets, but at the same time we must not overlook the vital importance of redoubled effort toward the development of lighter and more effective conventional weapons of every kind, which are urgently needed to accomplish a great many specific tasks for which atomic weapons would be totally unsuitable.

"We can never afford to turn our backs upon any weapon until we have something definitely better in every important respect which performs the same function. In any situation that might develop, the Army must always have the means to apply the exact amount of force required to do the job at hand.

"The Army is not bound by tradition; it is simply awake to realities. While we are reaching out to explore fully every possible avenue of approach to the better weapon or piece of equipment in every category, and to examine every idea, we are at the same time determined to keep our feet firmly on the ground of practicality.

"I HAVE THE GREATEST CONFIDENCE that the teamwork of the Army and our sister Services on the Defense Team, American science, and American industry,—as exemplified so well in the American Ordnance Association,—will continue to keep us safely ahead of any possible enemy in the technological race. I know that every challenge of the future will be met with the same ringing answer which has always been made in the past—nothing is impossible for the American Team!"

Seventh Army Commander's Inspection

progressively makes more demands.

The Kissingen schedule calls for a meeting with local German officials at 0945. General Clarke explains to the German civic leaders about the job that is being done by Colonel Briggs' men.

"We sleep better because of them," General Clarke comments. He emphasizes the Seventh Army's campaign to be "Good Neighbors to Our German Good Neighbors"—a campaign that has prompted a number of Green Bullet suggestions throughout the command. Next on the schedule is a visit to the 290th AFA Battalion, 155mm, 72d FA Group, commanded by Lt. Col. Bristow S. Hopper, USA. This is another unit that will be leaving the Seventh Army; it will switch places with the 534th AFA Battalion at Ft. Sill, Okla.

With Colonel Hopper and Col. Thomas R. Bruce, USA, who commands the 72d FA Group, General Clarke discusses the overall training problems which confront an Army commander. He notes that it costs about $100,000,000 to train a division.

The train departs Bad Kissingen at 1130. Colonel Hawkins is aboard and he and the General have an opportunity to continue their talk.

At 1328, General Clarke arrives at Fulda, which is the home of the Regiment's headquarters and the 1st Battalion, commanded by Lt. Col. John R. Watson, USA.

The afternoon's inspection begins at 1445 with a talk by General Clarke to men in the Motor Pool.

General Clarke tells them that "this is the only balanced peacetime field Army that our Nation has ever supported." He stresses the importance of fundamentals and says that "we must work ceaselessly to be certain that we can move, shoot, communicate and maintain. That's what makes an army click."

General Clarke speaks again about the dangers of the autumn season, particularly in the Fulda Gap area. "You are the eyes and ears of the Seventh Army," he says again and again to men of the 14th Cavalry Regiment, whose motto is "Sui-veez Moi."

General Clarke notes a soccer practice game in session and tells how he is encouraging soccer throughout the Seventh Army. "First of all," he says, "it's a fine game for soldiers, and we get away from the professionals. Everyone can play. But beyond that, it's a fine game for promoting our 'good neighbor' policy with the Germans."

At 1500, the General meets with the 15th Ordnance Company of the 85th Ordnance Battalion. Capt. Bernard S. Drebber, USA, recounts some problems that he is having, and Captain Tibbetts is quickly at hand to take note of what needs to be done.

Still going strong (though others in his party are wondering about the so-called mechanized army), General Clarke speaks at 1515 to soldiers of the Ordnance Company. He has learned that they are responsible for 1000 vehicles and 5000 weapons and impresses upon the soldiers the urgency of keeping this gear in tip-top condition.

He speaks against a backdrop which includes huge posters showing the uniforms worn by Russian officers and enlisted men. "Know Your Aggressor Enemy," one poster warns. Soldiers of the 14th, who keep the aggressor under surveillance, are experts on identifying Soviet and Czechoslovakian insignia.

A visit to regimental headquarters at 1530 is followed by an inspection of the 591st Armored Medical Company, which displays its mobile hospital facilities. Again, General Clarke is inquisitive about preparations for handling atomic casualties.

At 1630, General Clarke is introduced by Colonel Hawkins to a group of officers assembled at "The Border Theater."

"If you don't have the feel of the troops," he tells the Sui-veez Moi officers, "you can't command."

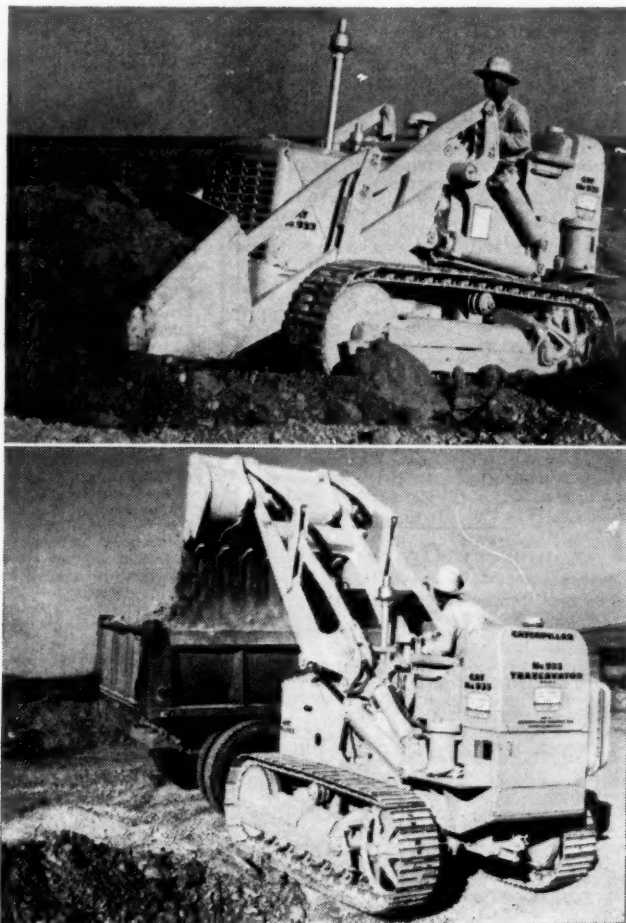

"Our factor of safety consists of our degree of excellence—nothing else," the Seventh Army commander asserts. He adds that this excellence is achieved and maintained by officers and NCO's at all echelons constantly checking up on what their men are doing and how they are doing their job.

The inspection trip is now almost over. There remains only a reception at 1800 attended by local German dignitaries and a dinner later at the home of Colonel and Mrs. Hawkins at which the three battalion commanders are also present. Lt. Col. M. W. Kingdom, USA, leads the 3d Bn. at Hersfeld.

The General's train departs Fulda at 2300. At 0600 Thursday, General Clarke and Captain Tibbetts are met by his senior aide, Maj. George Ried, USA (the two aides take turns on the inspection trips), and there is a quick review of pending business.

At 0630, General Clarke leaves for breakfast with Mrs. Clarke and then a full day's work at Seventh Army Headquarters, including dispatch of perhaps 10 or 15 Green Bullets and work on arrangements for the next inspection trip.

NEW NO. 933 TRAXCAVATOR* MAKES GOOD IN TOUGH MATERIAL

Stephens County, Texas, uses caliche for surfacing many of its roads. Caliche is a hard crust of calcium carbonate and clay that forms on stony alkaline soil. It makes a good road surface, but it's tough material to dig.

Last fall it was apparent to County Commissioner I. L. Griffith that the front-end loader of another make which was being used just "couldn't get into the heavy stuff." He arranged to purchase a CAT* No. 933 Traxcavator. The new machine handles the tough material without difficulty and loads out the trucks quickly, as shown in the pictures above.

The No. 933 is one of three new Traxcavators in the Caterpillar line, each built with plenty of power and traction for efficient digging and loading under all conditions. The bucket capacity of the No. 933 is 1 cu. yd. The bigger No. 955 and No. 977 hold 1½ cu. yd. and 2¼ cu. yd. respectively. A new arm design provides fast, high lifting action, and the machines have one-hand bucket control for easy operation and maneuverability. An oil-type clutch reduces maintenance and adds greatly to clutch life. Full loads at every pass are assured by 40-degree tilt back of the bucket at ground level.

The Caterpillar line of Traxcavators includes the most efficient machines to meet a wide variety of excavating and loading needs. Their increased power, speed and dependability are direct results of advanced Caterpillar research and engineering.
